THE GALLEON SETON HALL UNIVERSITY

SOUTH ORANGE, NEW JERSEY

When the stress and confusion of this contemporary world frustrates us in such a way that we loose sight of our purpose, we start a search for our position in this tumultuous place.

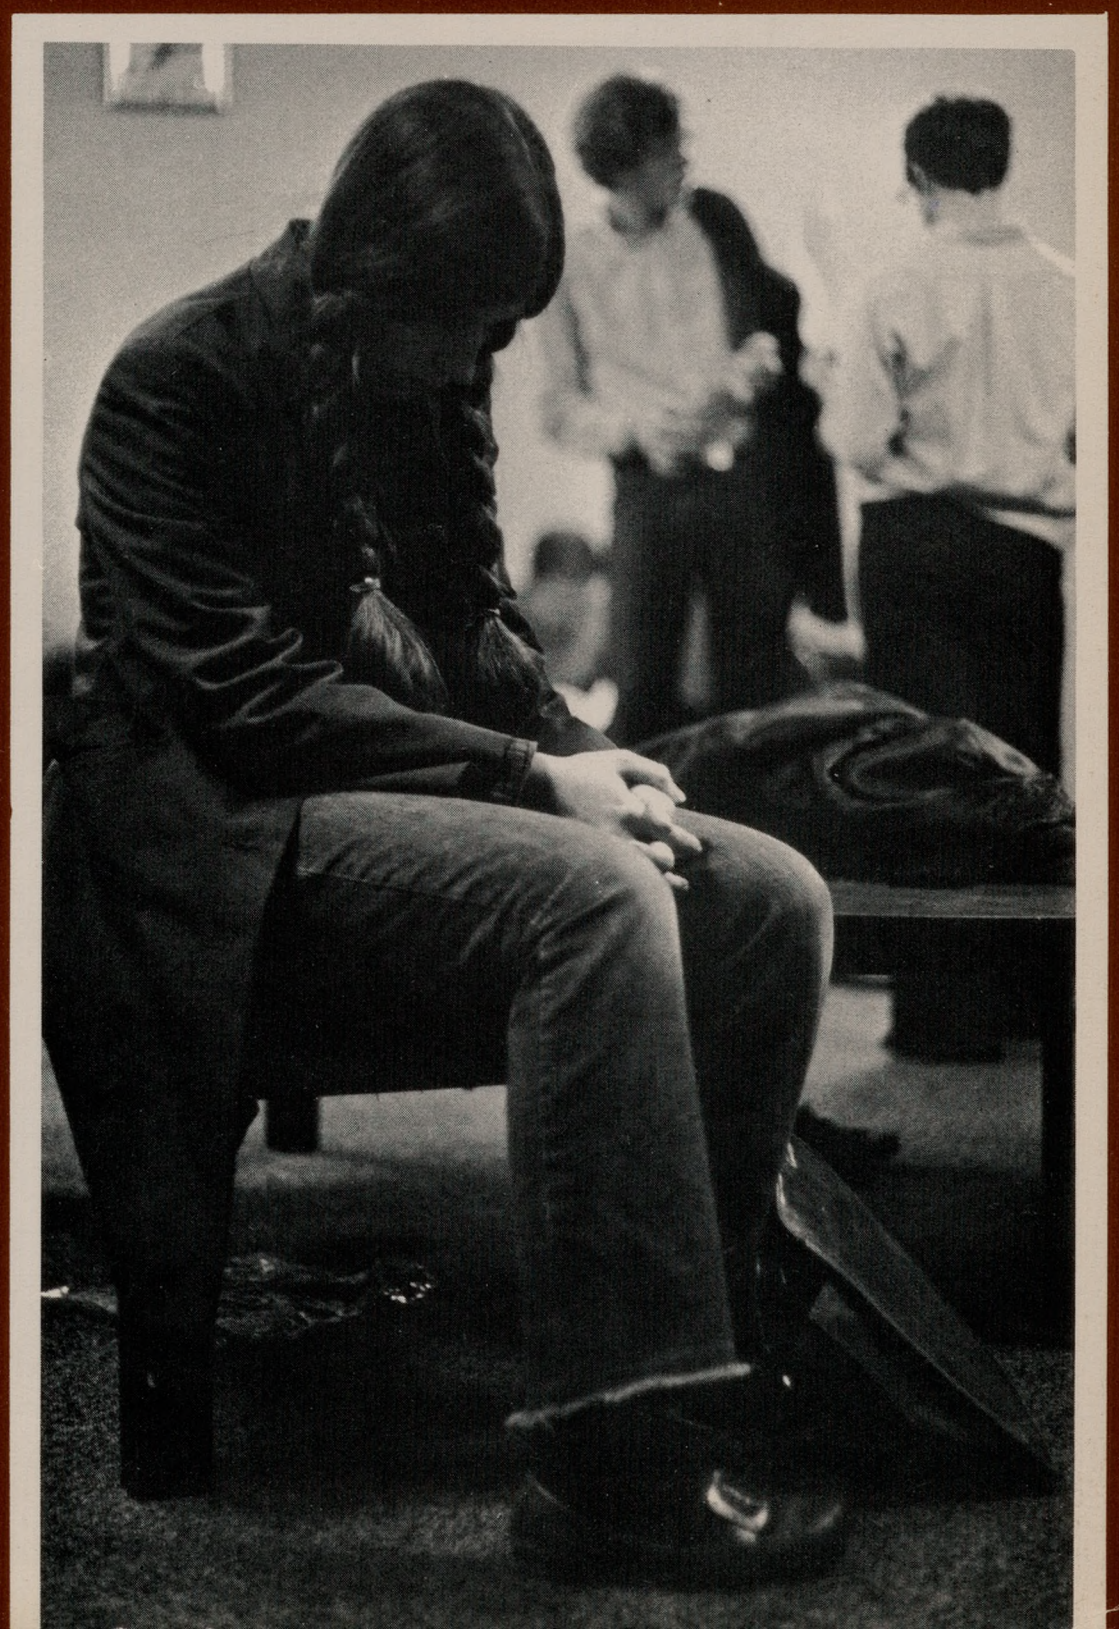

We must find the answer. We examine ourselves for we feel that there must be some reason for our being here at this specific time.

Sometimes we feel that we understand, and we are propelled onward. We look to the future with great anticipation. The good in everything rises to the surface, and we enjoy being alive.

But all becomes muddy, and we collapse again into confusion, despair, and frustration. The world spins around at such a rate that we lose hope and doubt our own abilities and convictions.

Now we turn our face from the mirror. We seek others; we need someone else for we know that it is in other people that we grow. We search for someone to share our lives with.

Our hunger is usually satisfied, and we find someone with whom it's great to be with. We don't have to speak. We're just happy that we're together.

We learn more about ourselves and others, and we develop somewhat of an understanding of why, who, what we are. This is so fantastic, and it motivates us to uncover an even greater knowledge of ourselves.

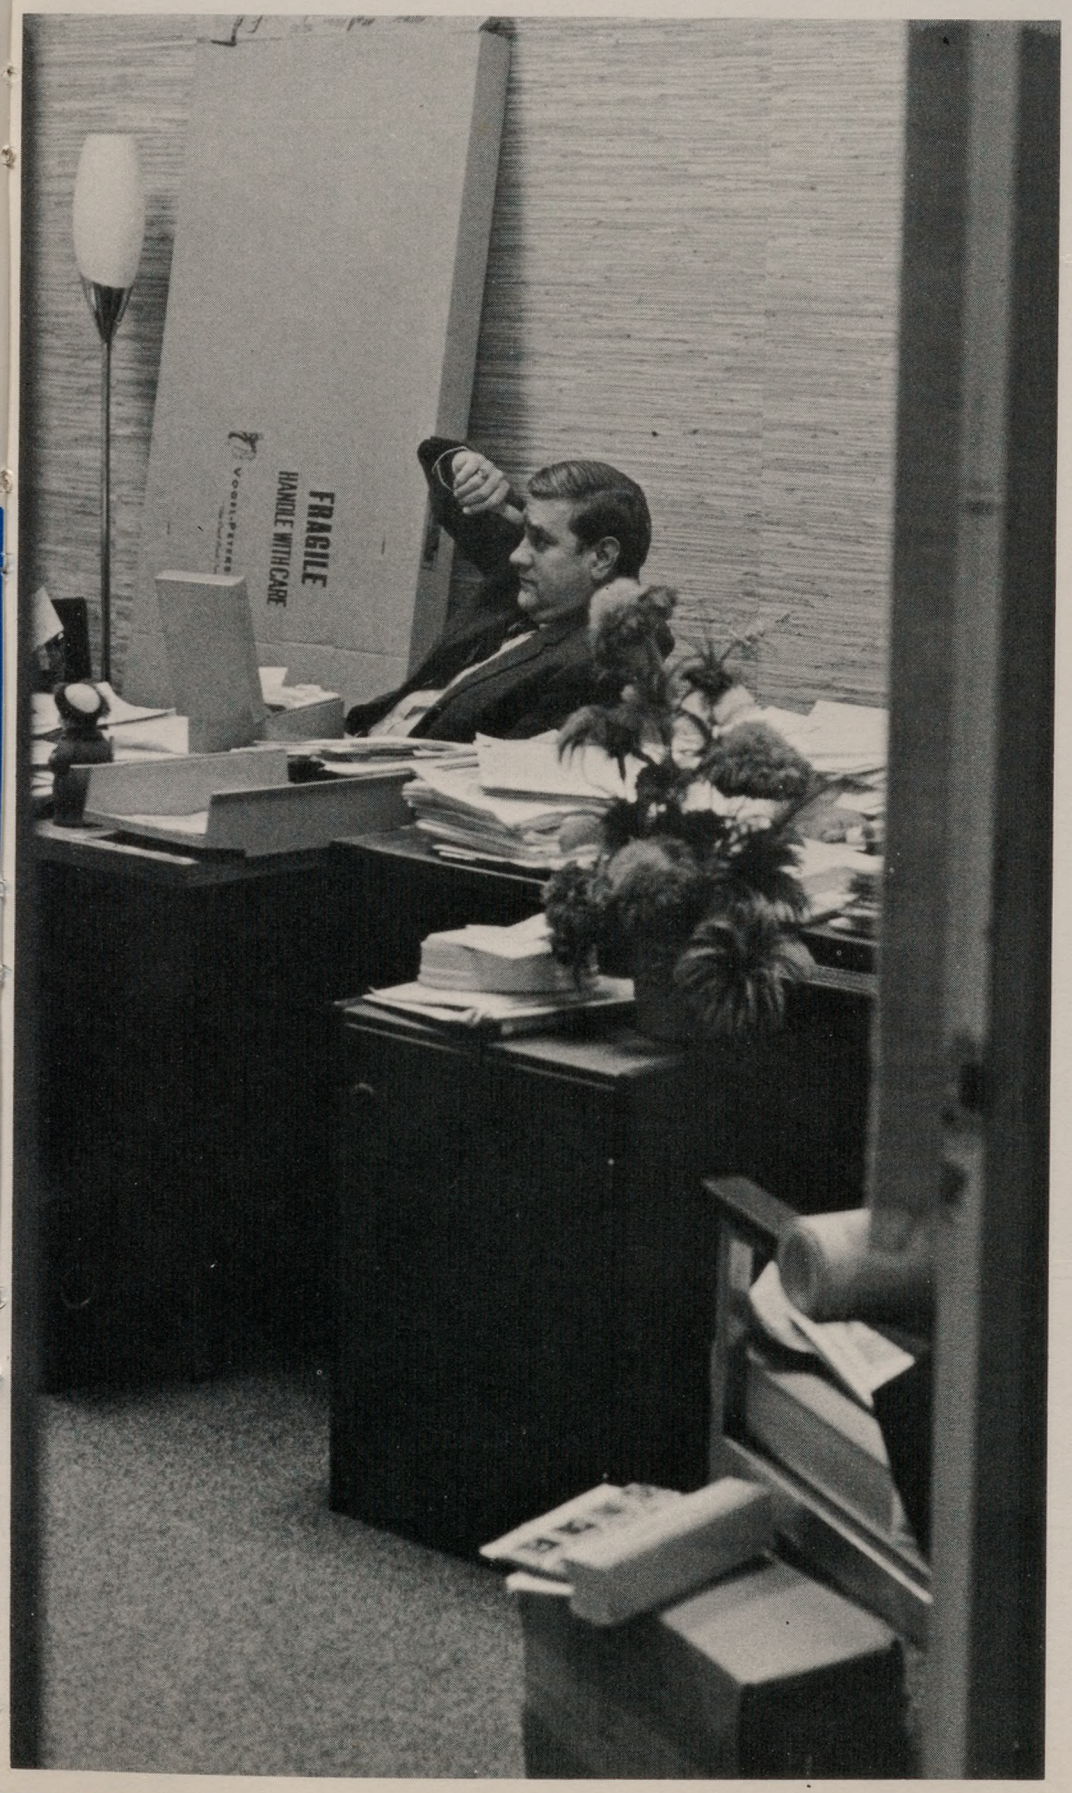

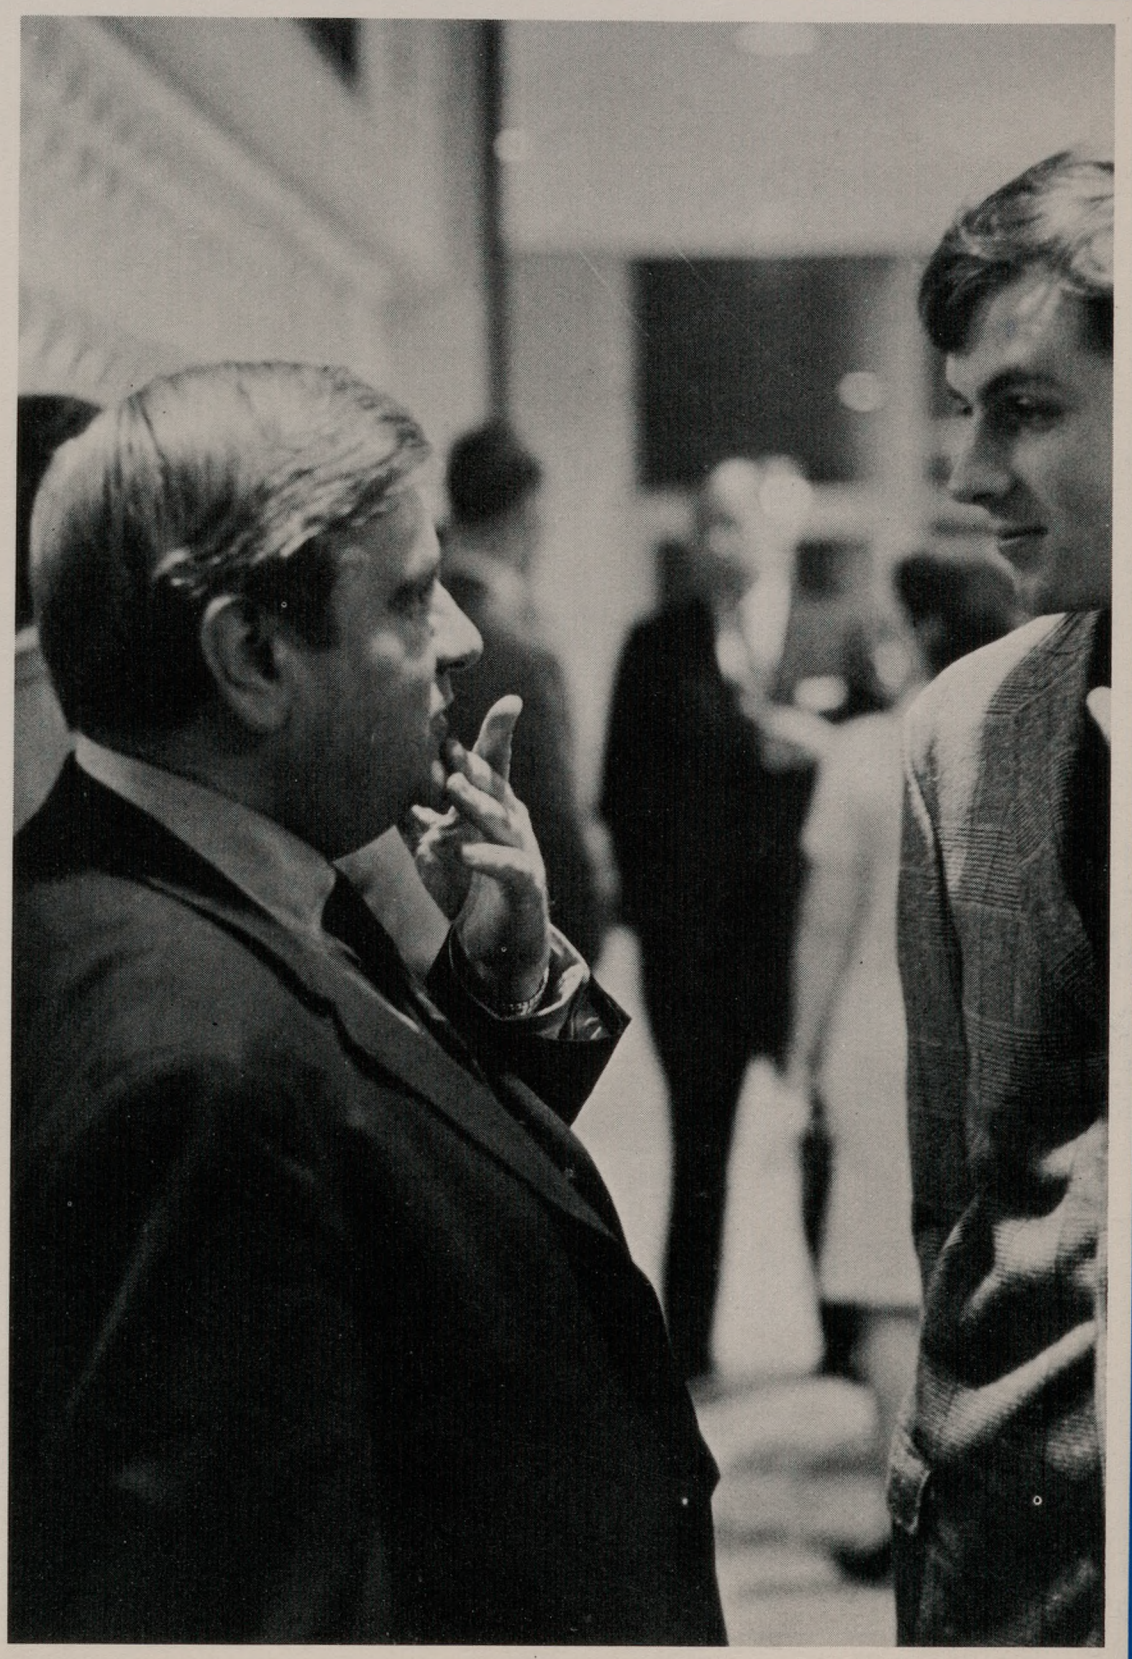

So we leave our comfortable place to go out to experience more. We can't find total fulfillment through one person alone. We need to surround ourselves with people who love living, and who display it to everyone. We search to find a greater meaning in our lives.

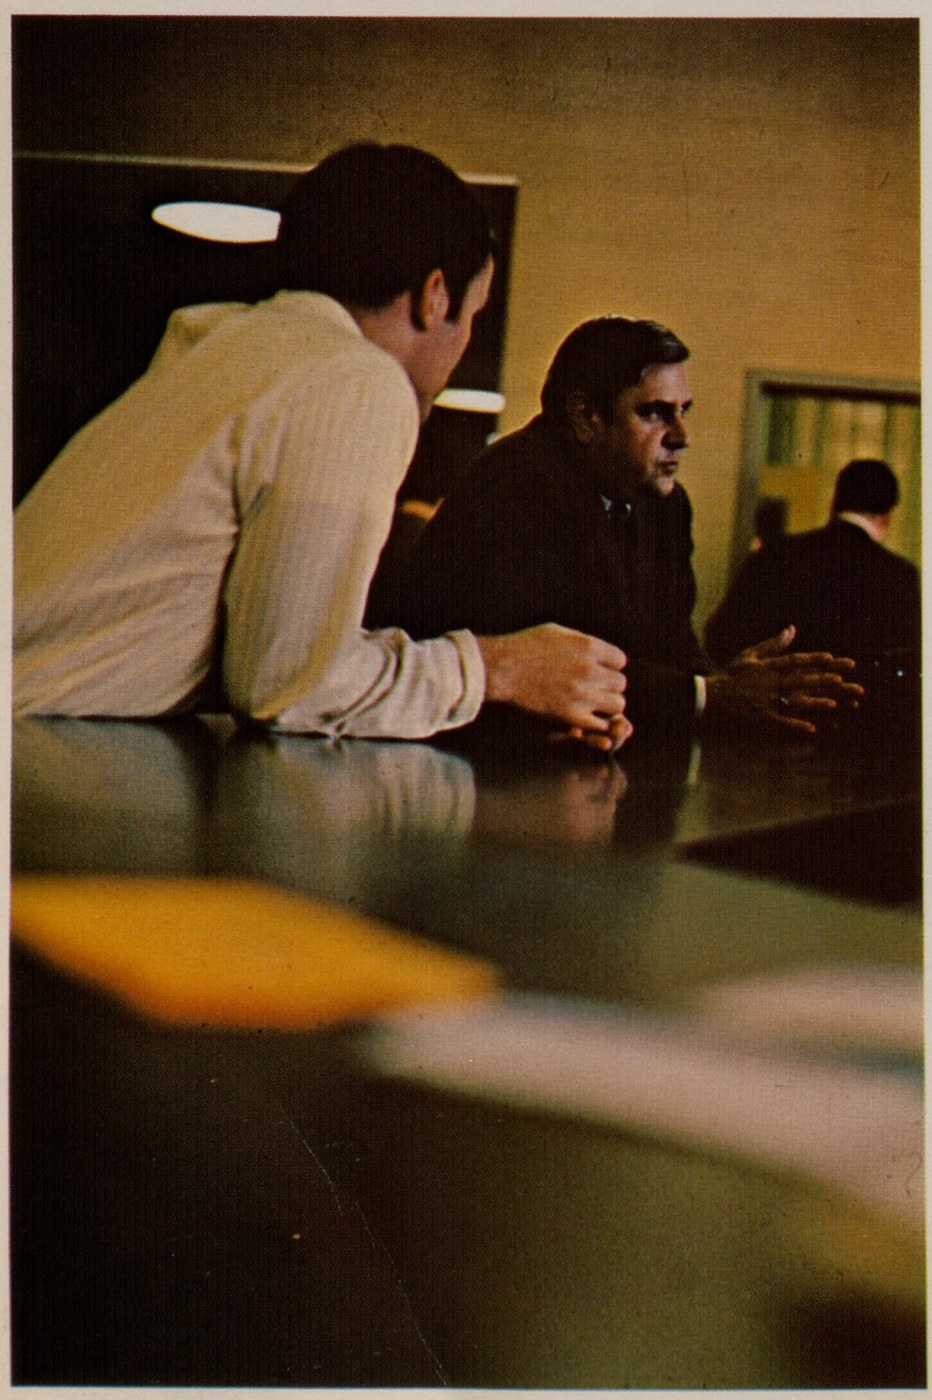

Recently to Seton Hall a man has come who seems to have a rare quality. He is a man who has shown us what life is all about. We admire him as one who has meaning in his own life and who has conveyed this meaning to those around him.

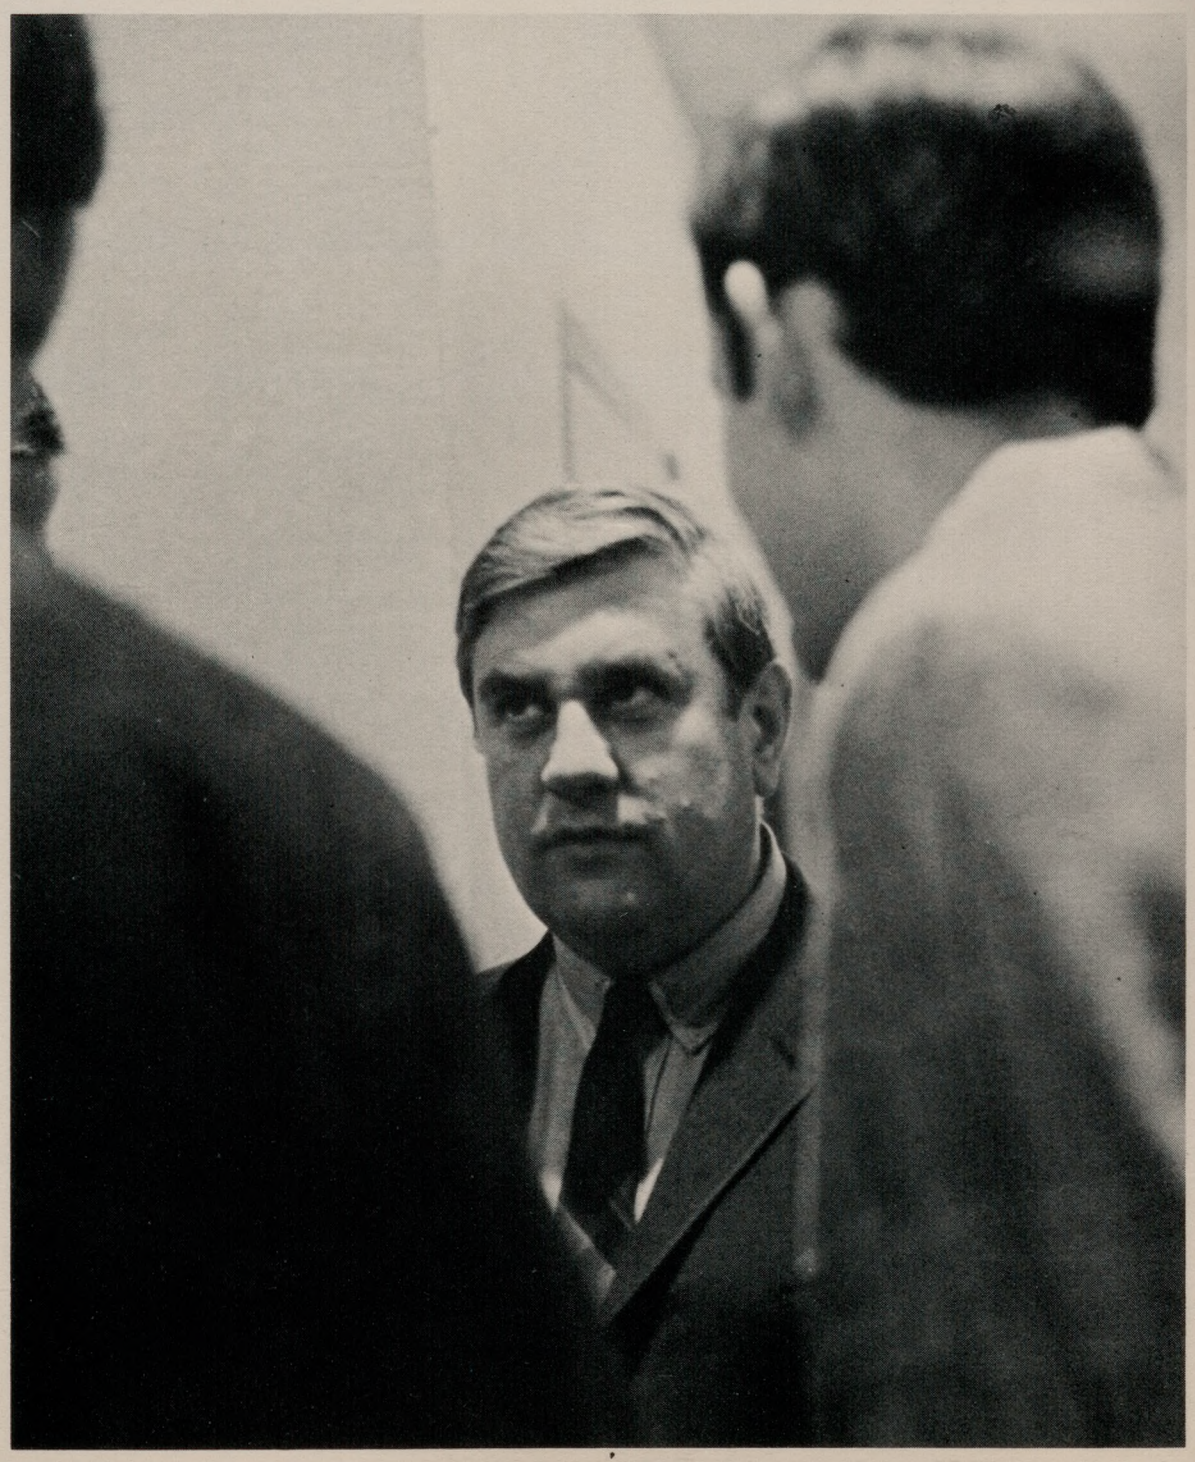

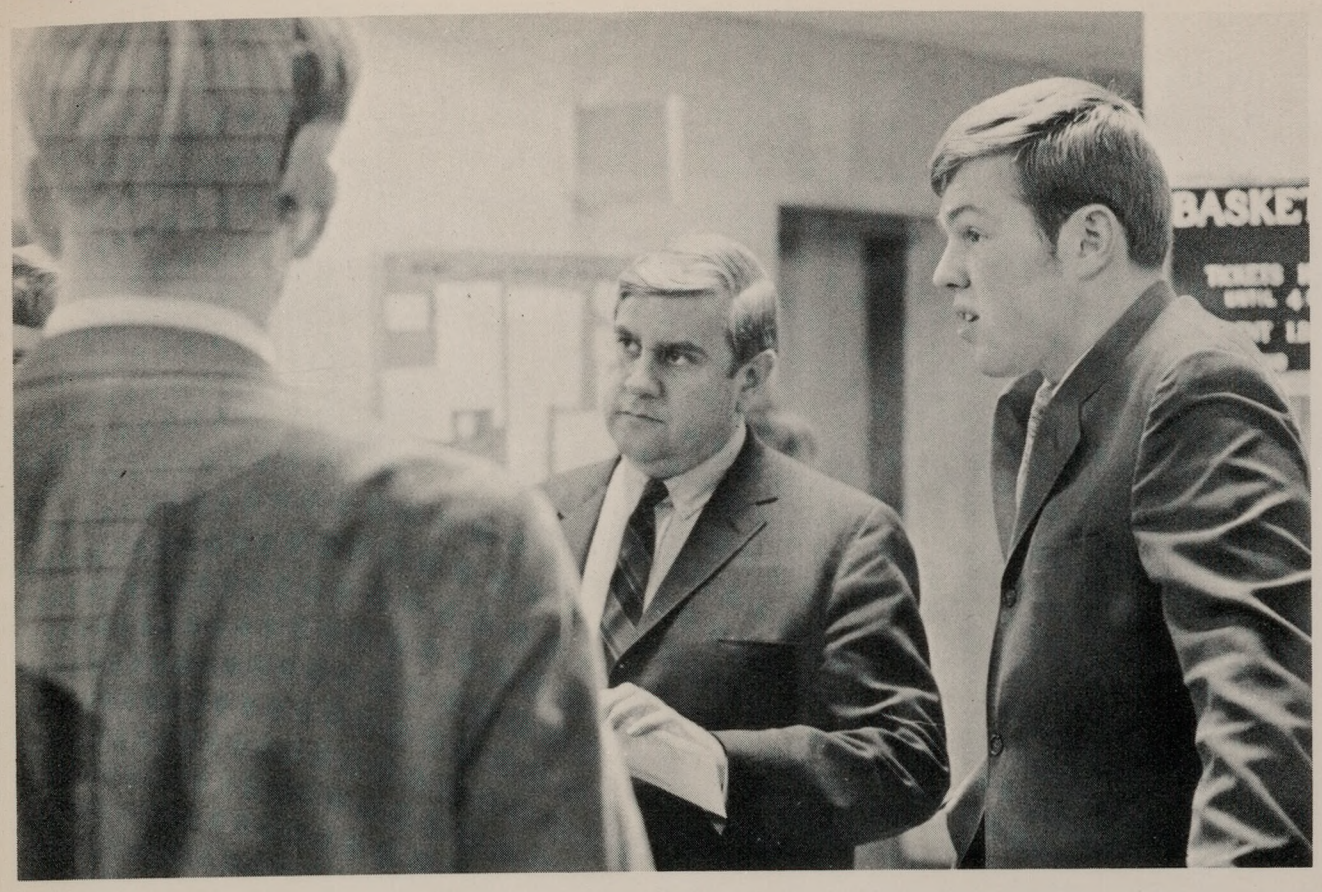

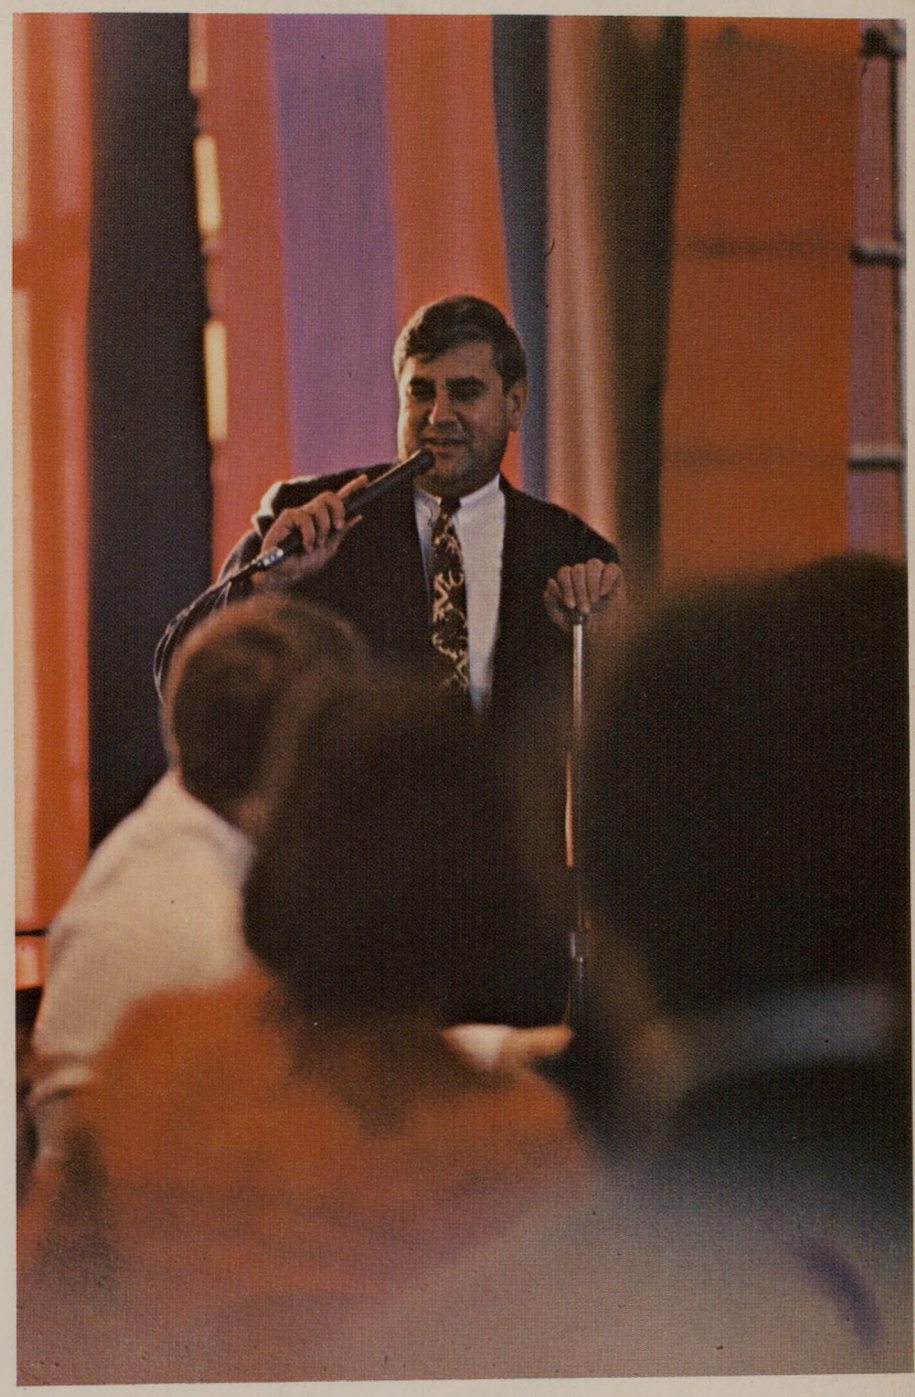

It is for this reason that we dedicate this book to him, Mr. Edward Hendrickson. His close friends say that he has found his 'fountain of youth' in working with college students. Indeed he is youthful for he possesses the ability to be both a friend and an administrator to us.

In these days when an administrator has to earn the respect and faith of those he guides, Mr. Hendrickson has been able to rise above the mire of the Establishment to manifest his integrity. He does this all by being himself at all times.

So we learn from him how to communicate with people. There are times when you surround yourselves with many people, and everything is good and beautiful. You forget all your problems because now they seem so insignificant. You wish that you could be this way forever. You wish that you could go back to the beginning and start the good times all over again.

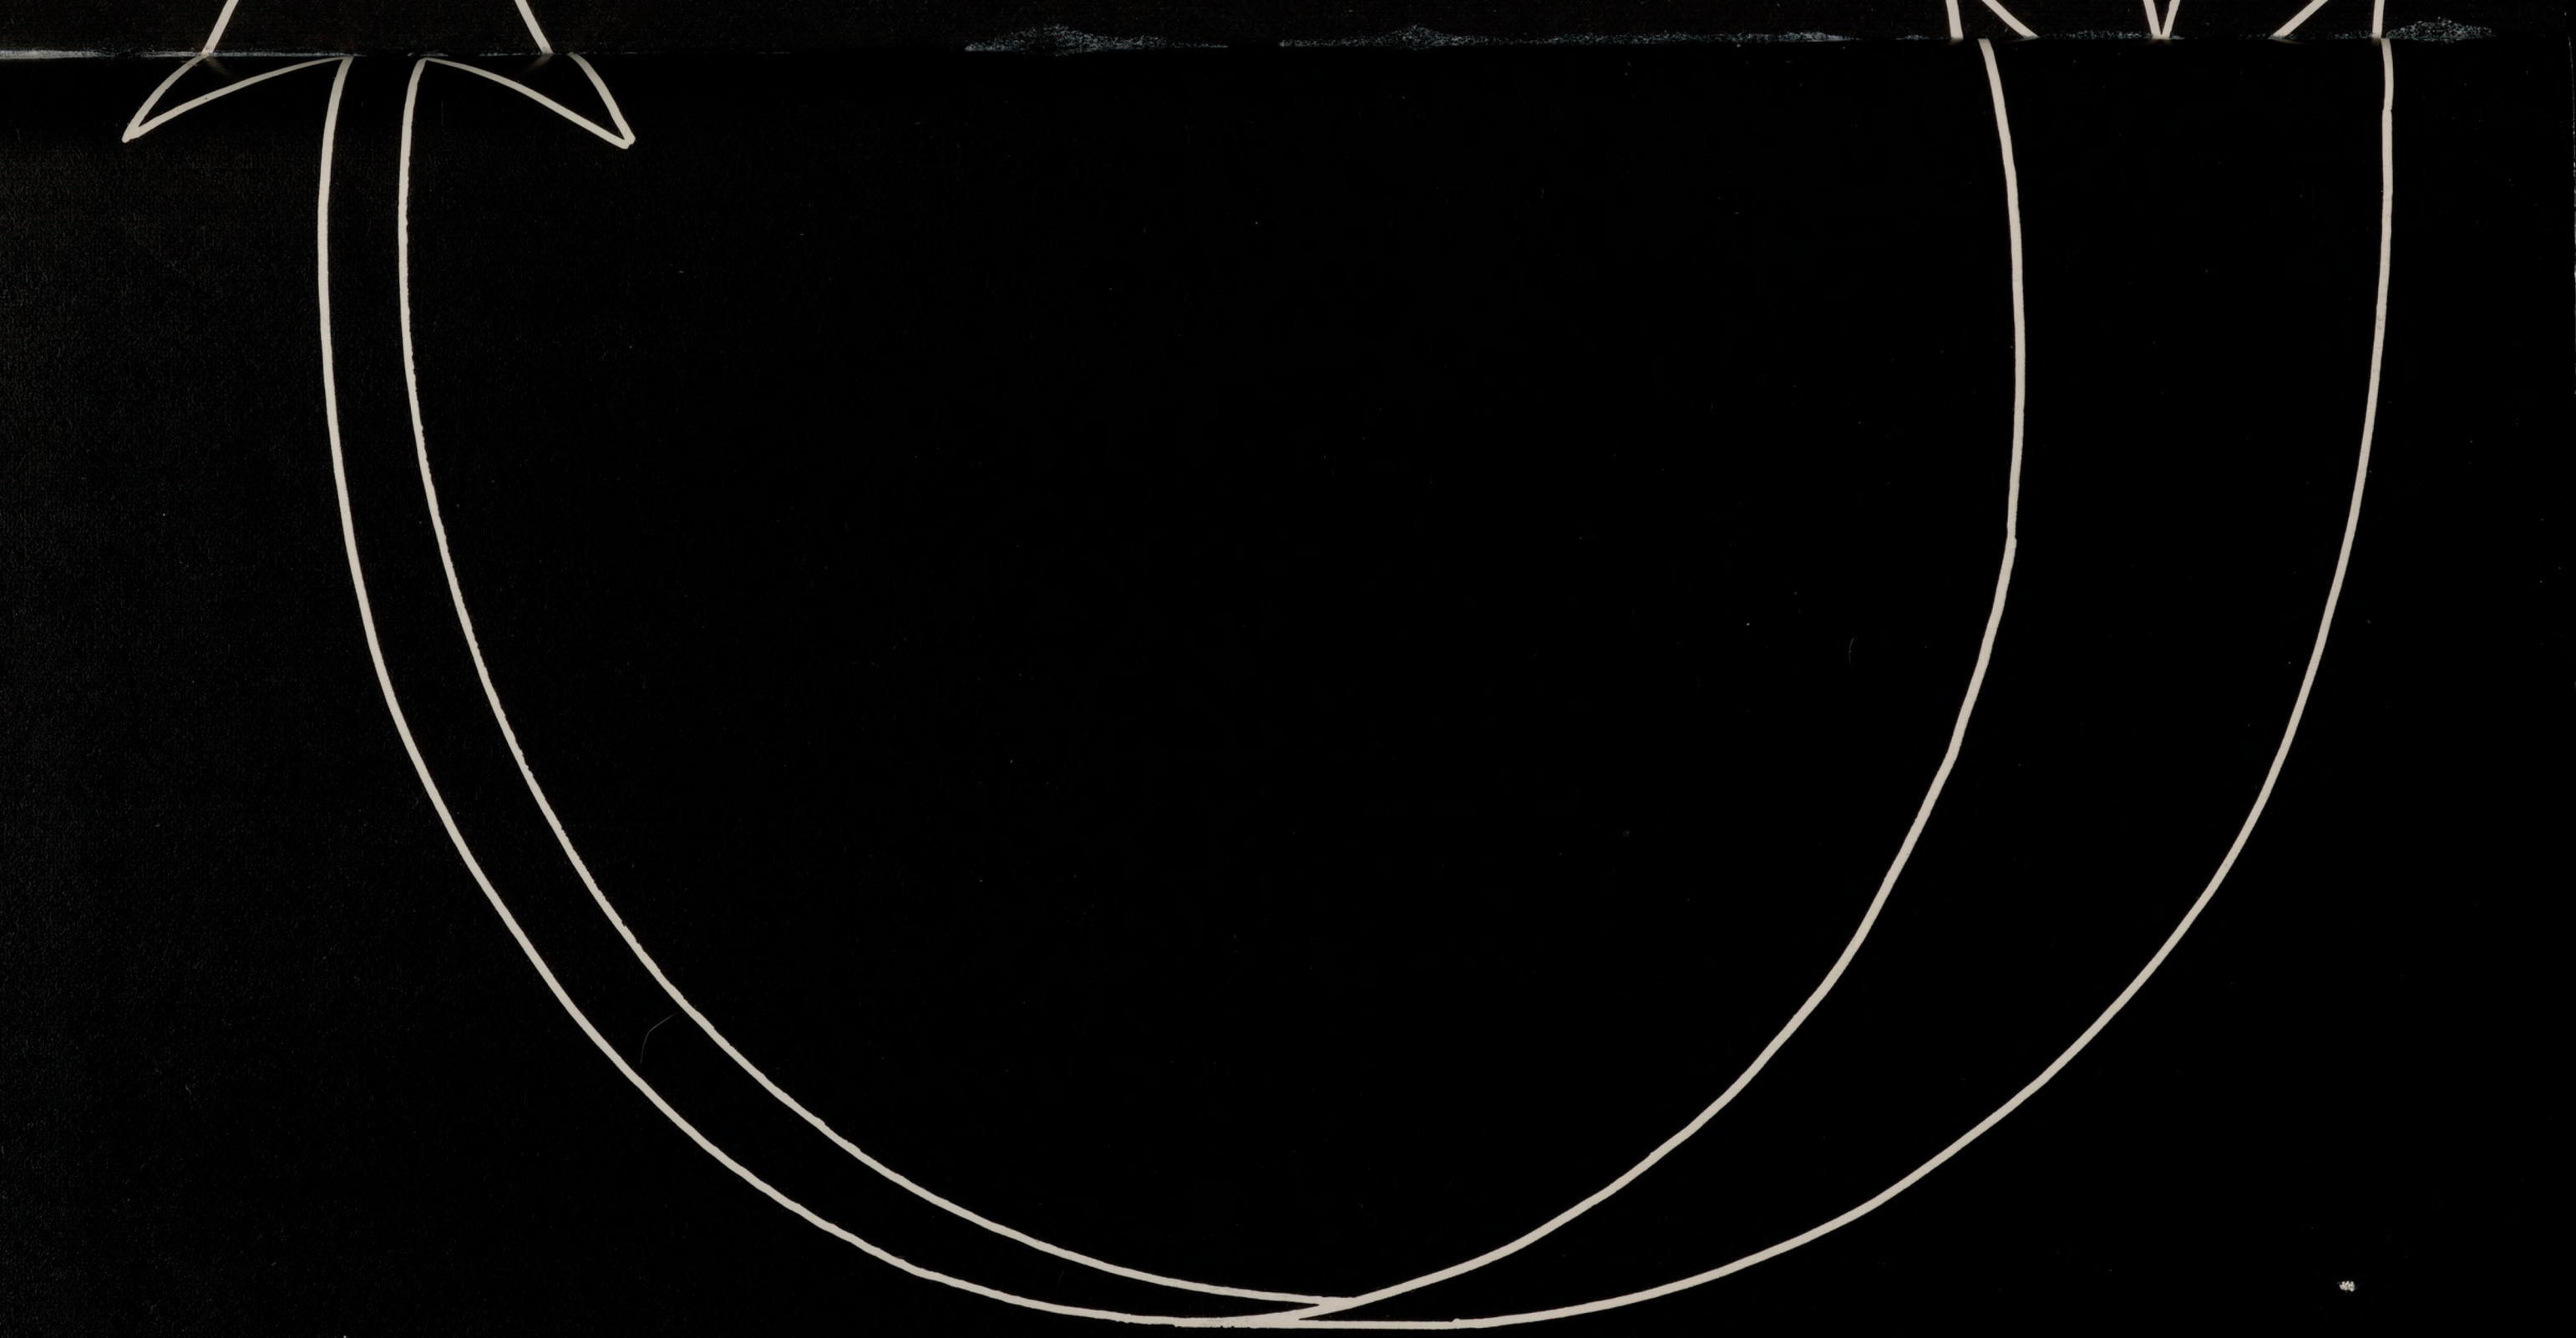

Then, when everyone leaves, and you are alone, you wonder why people still hate each other, why people kill each other, why people don't love one another. You sit there frustrated in that you don't know what you can do to change these people. However, you do know that you have to do something for you wouldn't be able to live with yourself.

"If I don't at least try, will this be the only mark I make on the world?" Will it?

How long has it been?

Not long, measured in years

four turns of four seasons

a small part of the wheel of life.

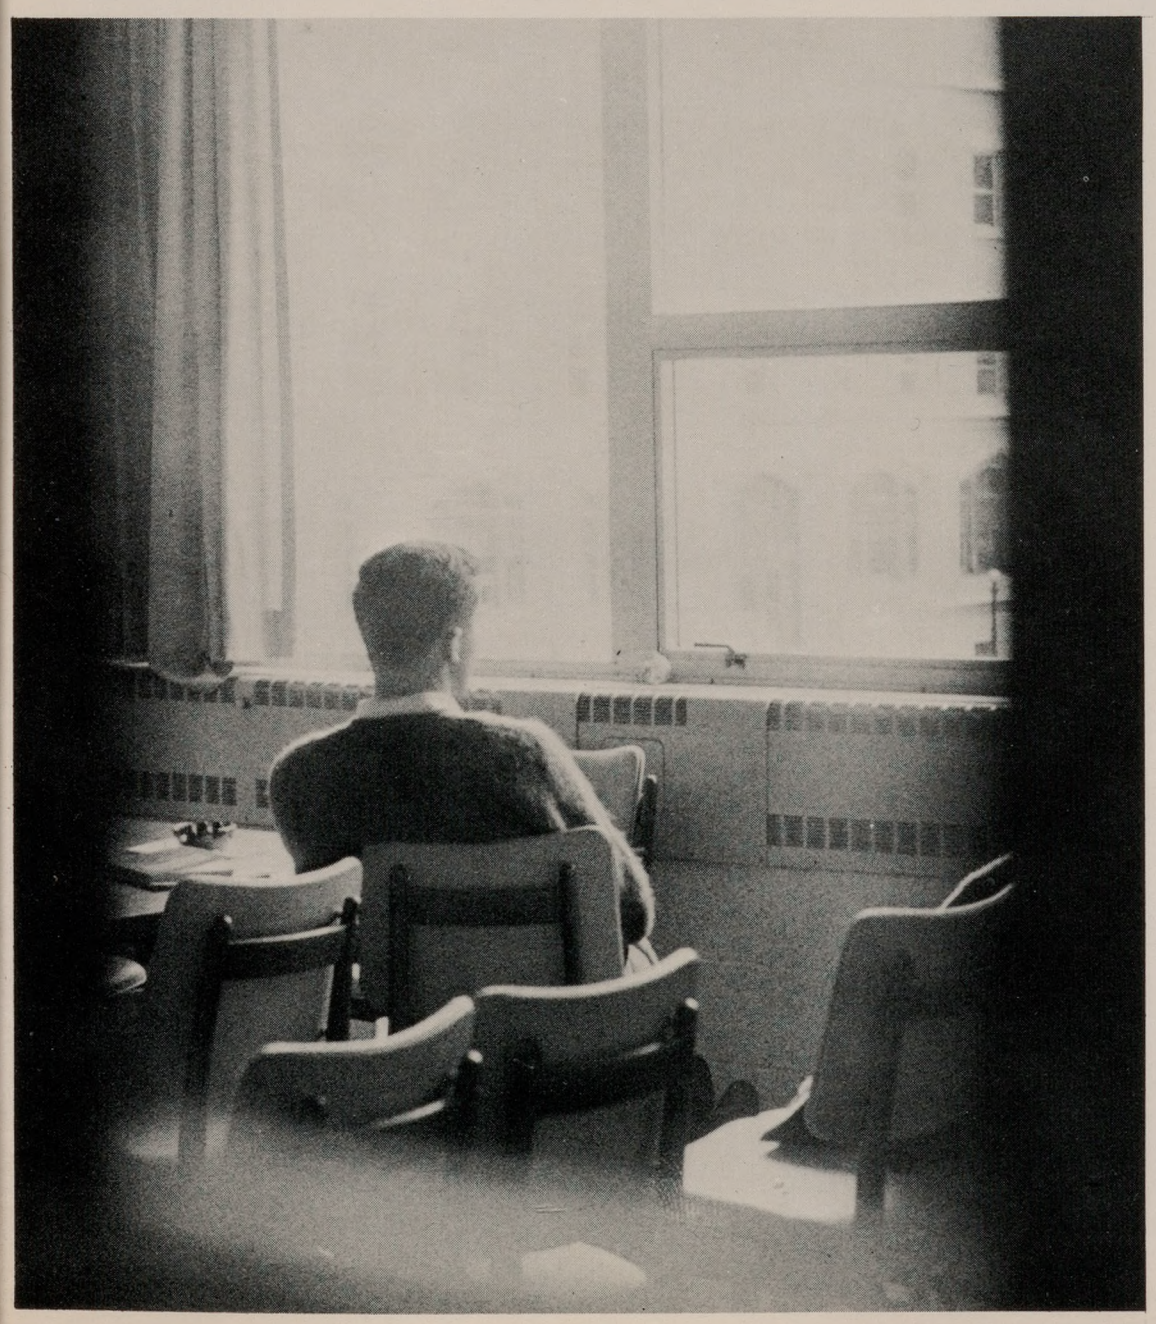

Each of us began it alone,
vague in our expectations,
vague in our desires,
but wanting very much to grow

But there's not much light in loneliness
and not much grows in the dark.

Realizing we can't do it alone
we work at finding others—a struggle at first but even more a need.

Then more beautiful days; like one flower opening to find another opening too.

Finding one open,

it is much easier

to look around and find others, many others,

opening as well.

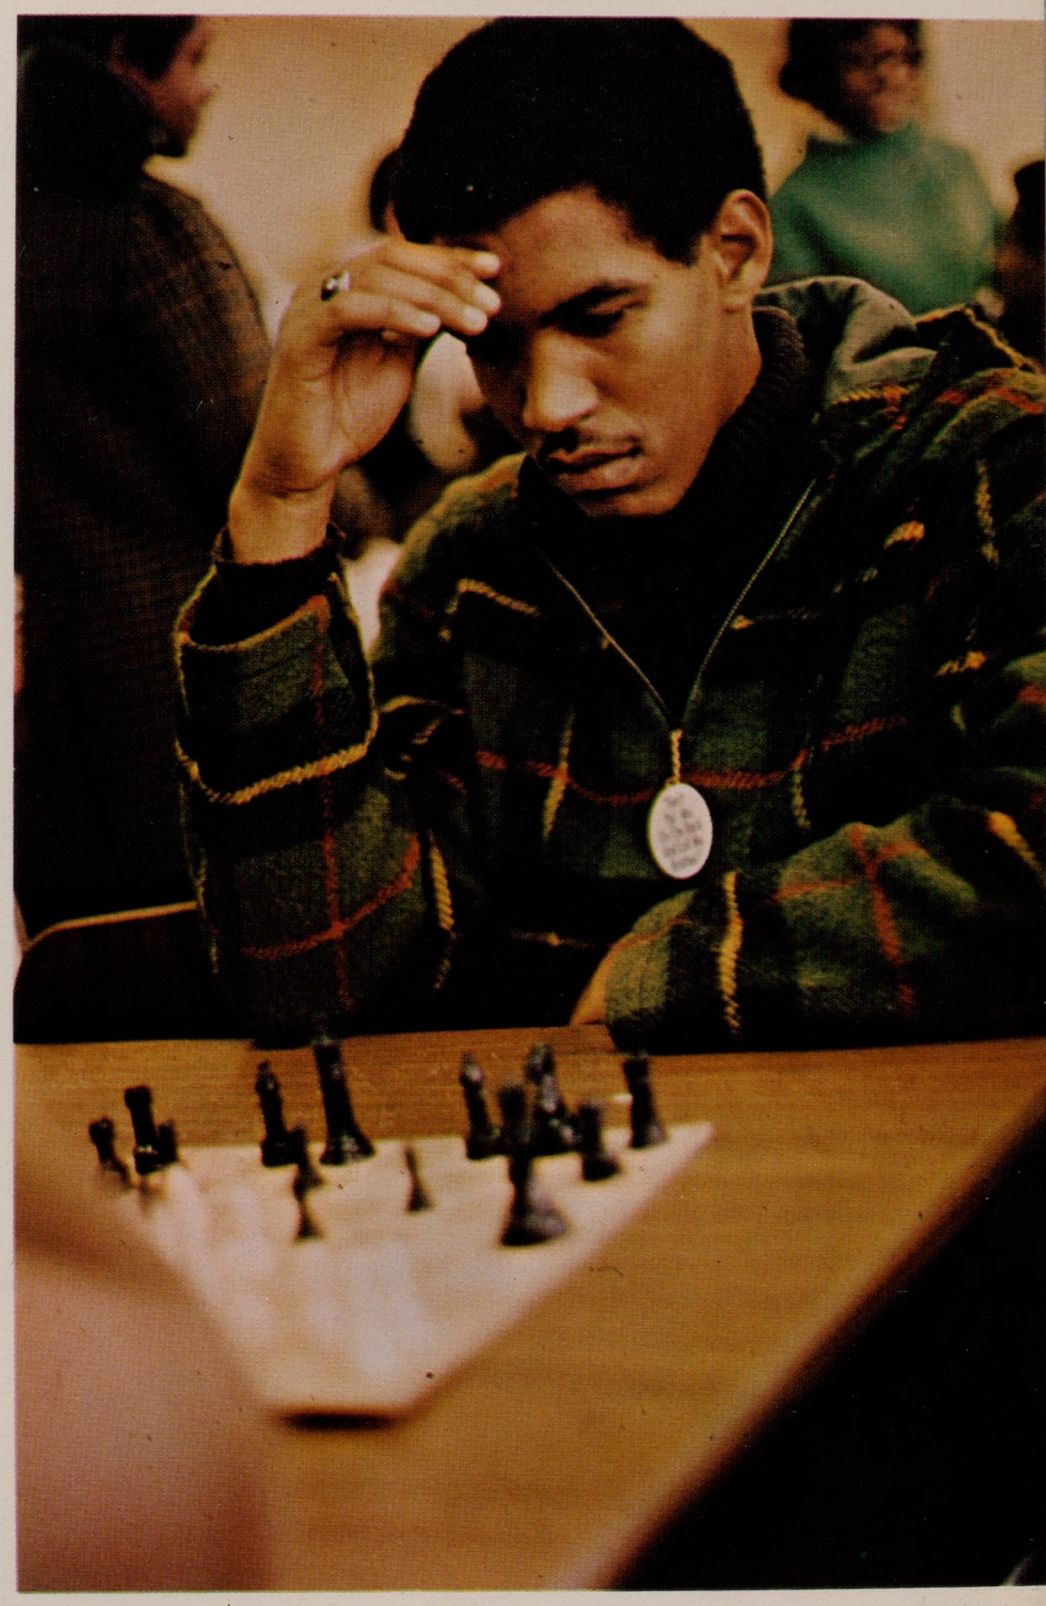

Relaxed, more confident,
we find time for many things,
but mostly many people.

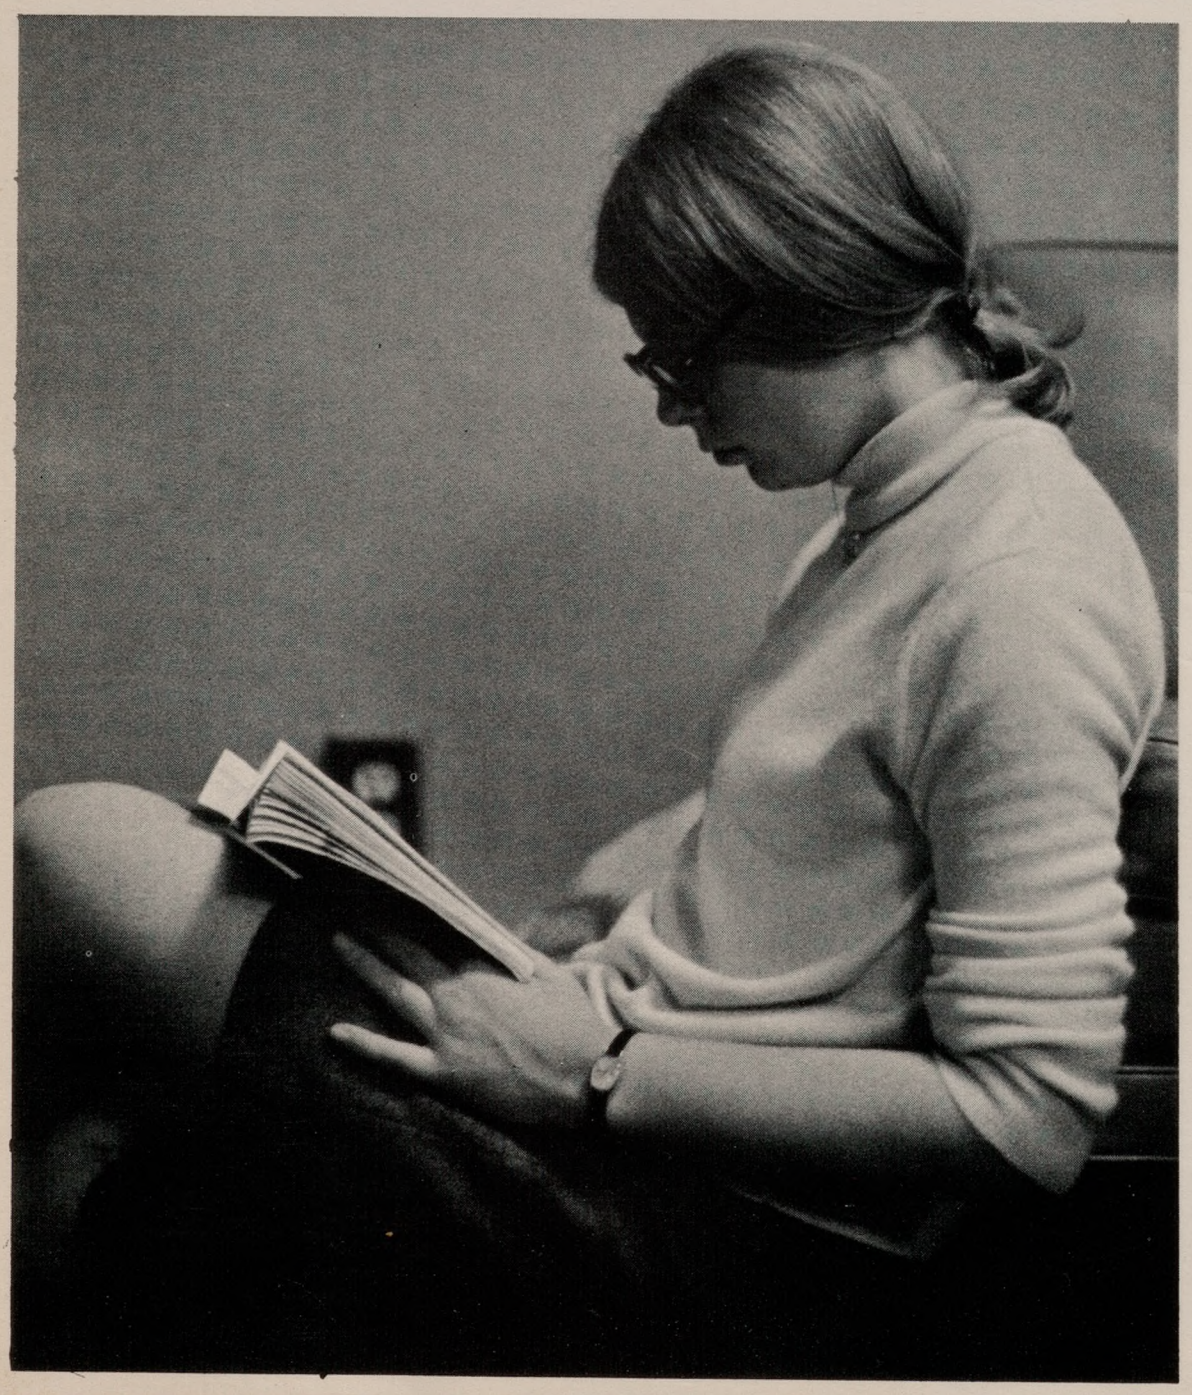

Seems such a long way from the alone first days. Strange how one can pack so much in four short turns.

Strange also how often it seemed there was not enough time to do it all;

how sometimes thoughts of what we wanted to do and what had to be done collided.

Look back now on the thousands of feelings and on the thousands of faces.

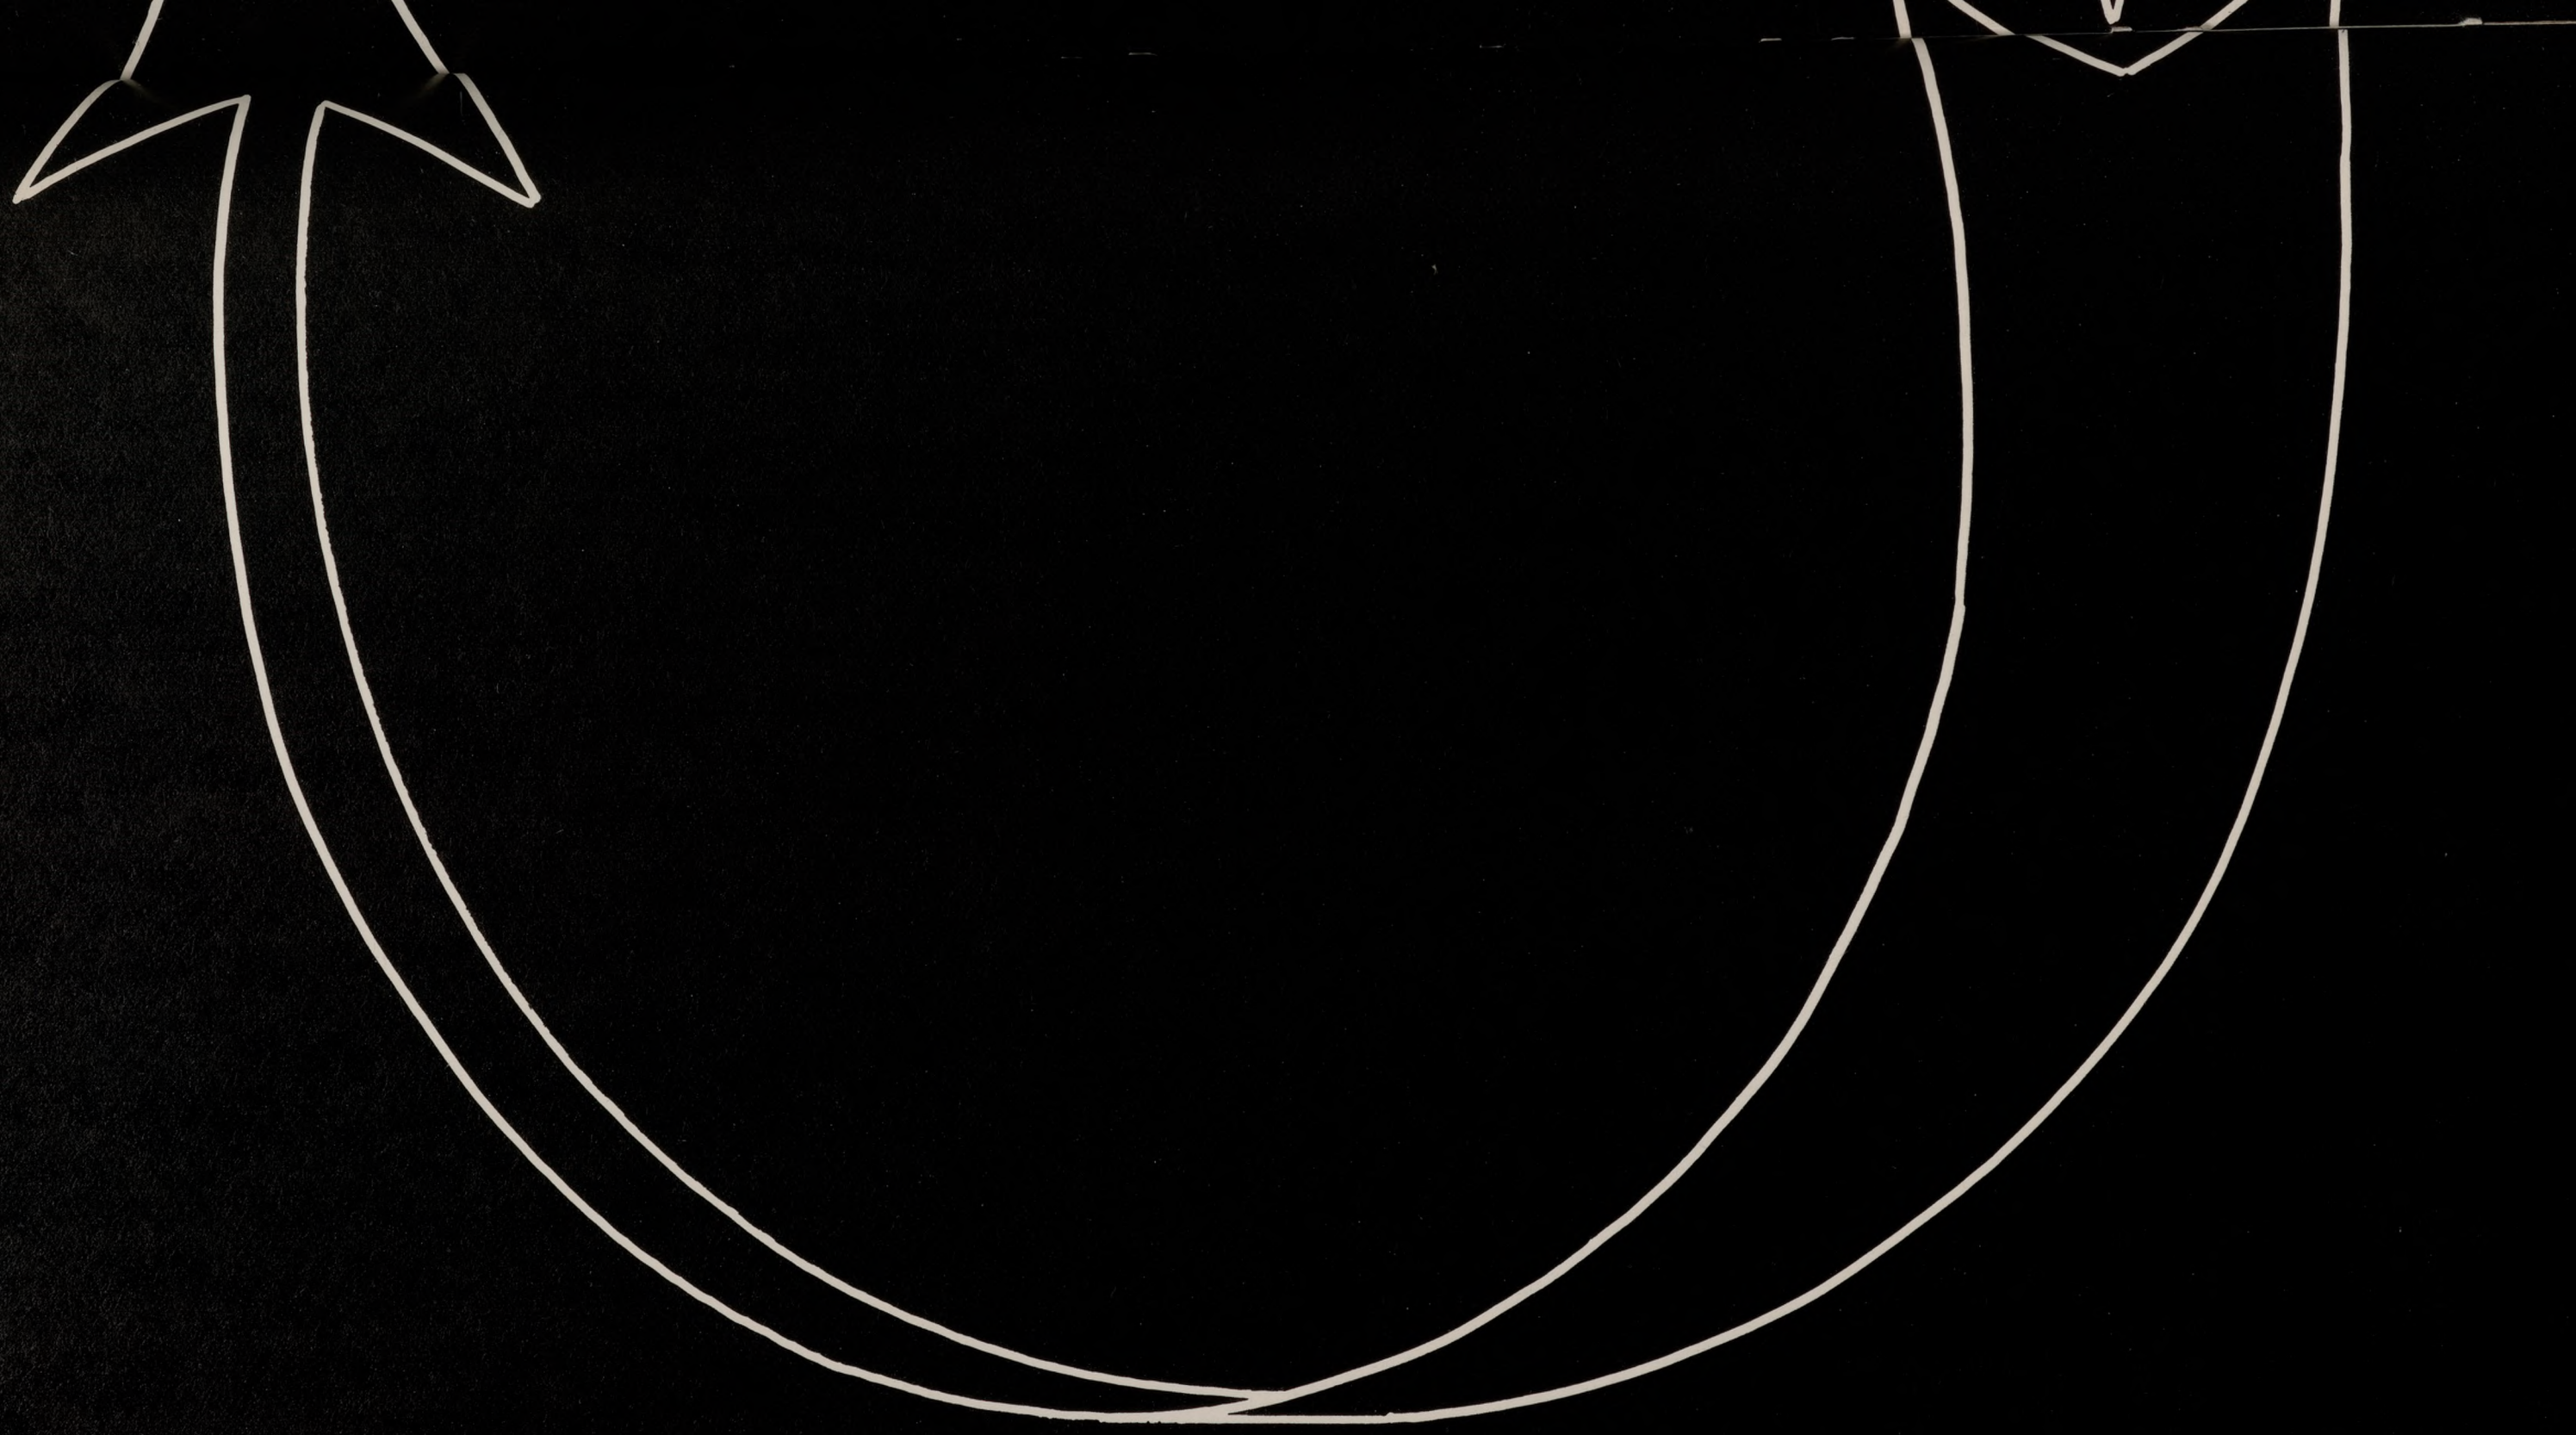

This was a microcosm of life and in what measure we found them here will we ever find them.

The clay pipe seen in close-up view below can be seen to the right of center in the photo above.

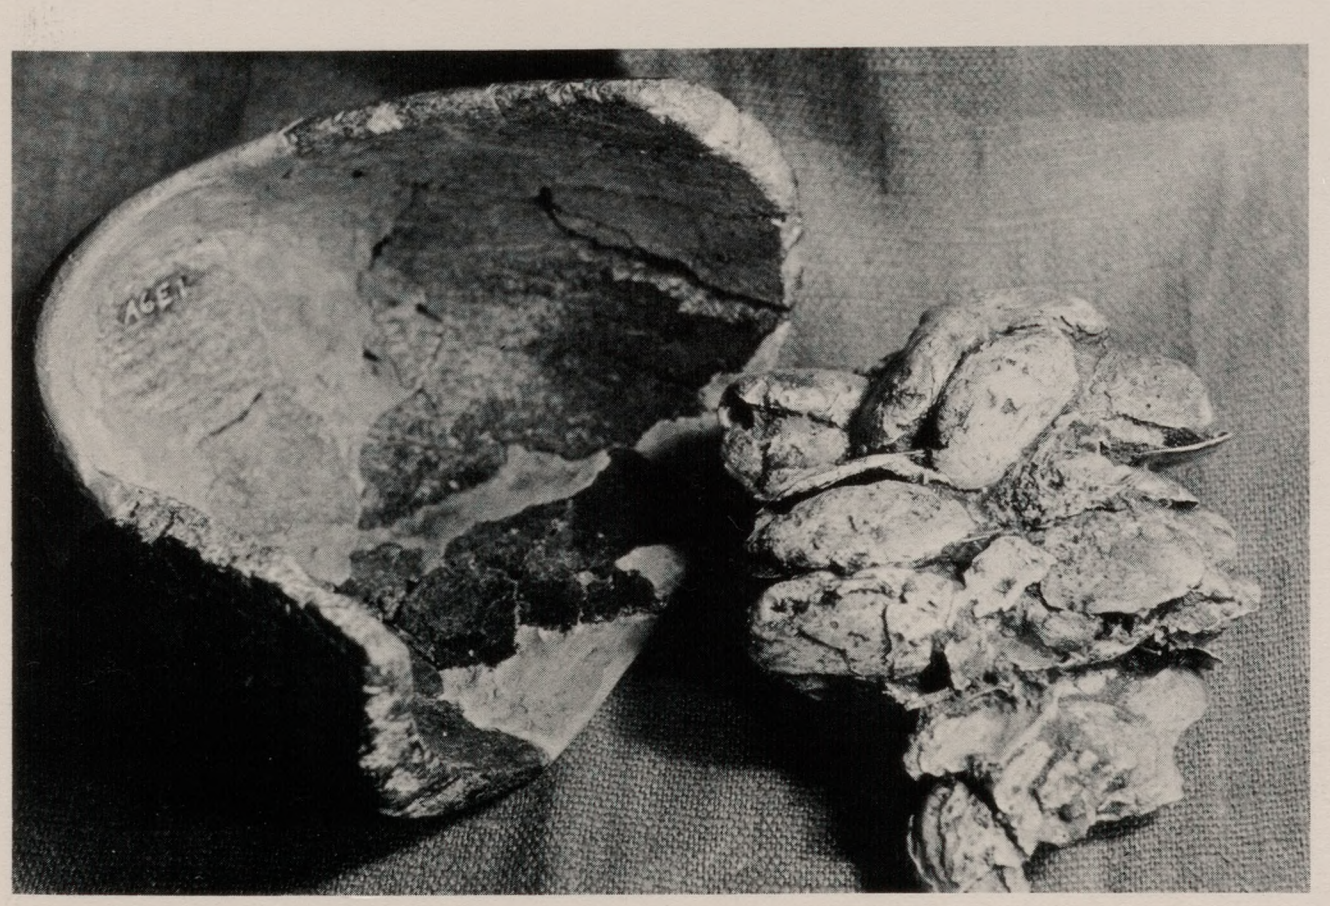

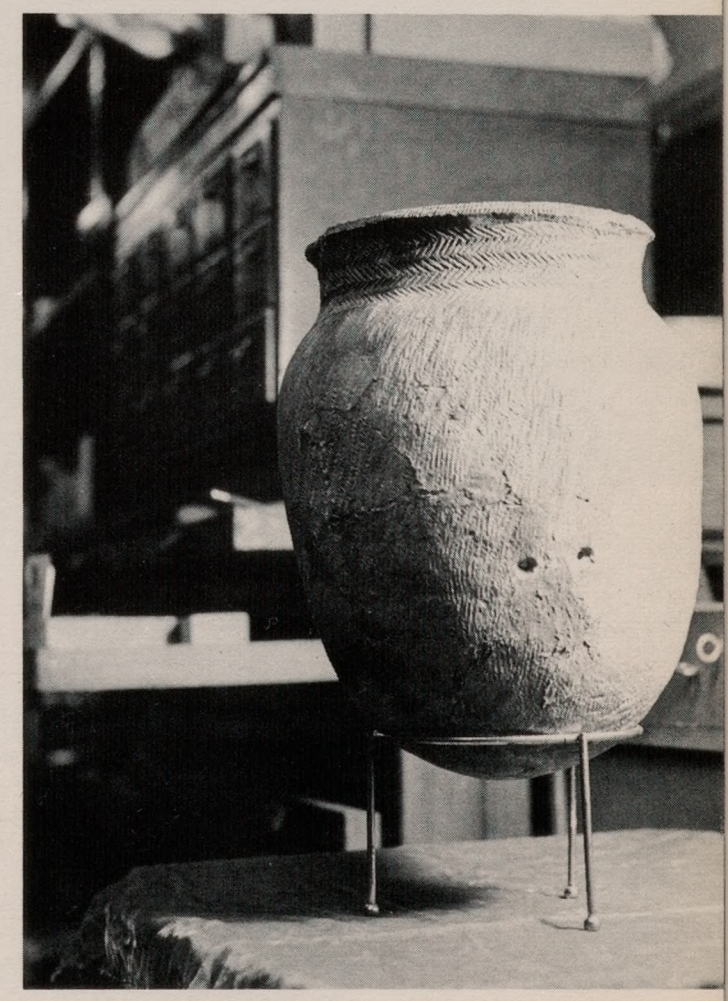

One of the more spectacular finds was this burial site; this six year old child, molar teeth just appearing in the upper jaw, was buried long before Columbus came to America.

Culinary items: on the left is one of the first types of cooking utensils to be found in America; on the right are muscles—used at that time for food.

This giant earthen jar graces the work area of Mr. Herbert Kraft, Director of the Museum.

DEDICATION OF DORMITORY AND HUMANITIES BUILDING

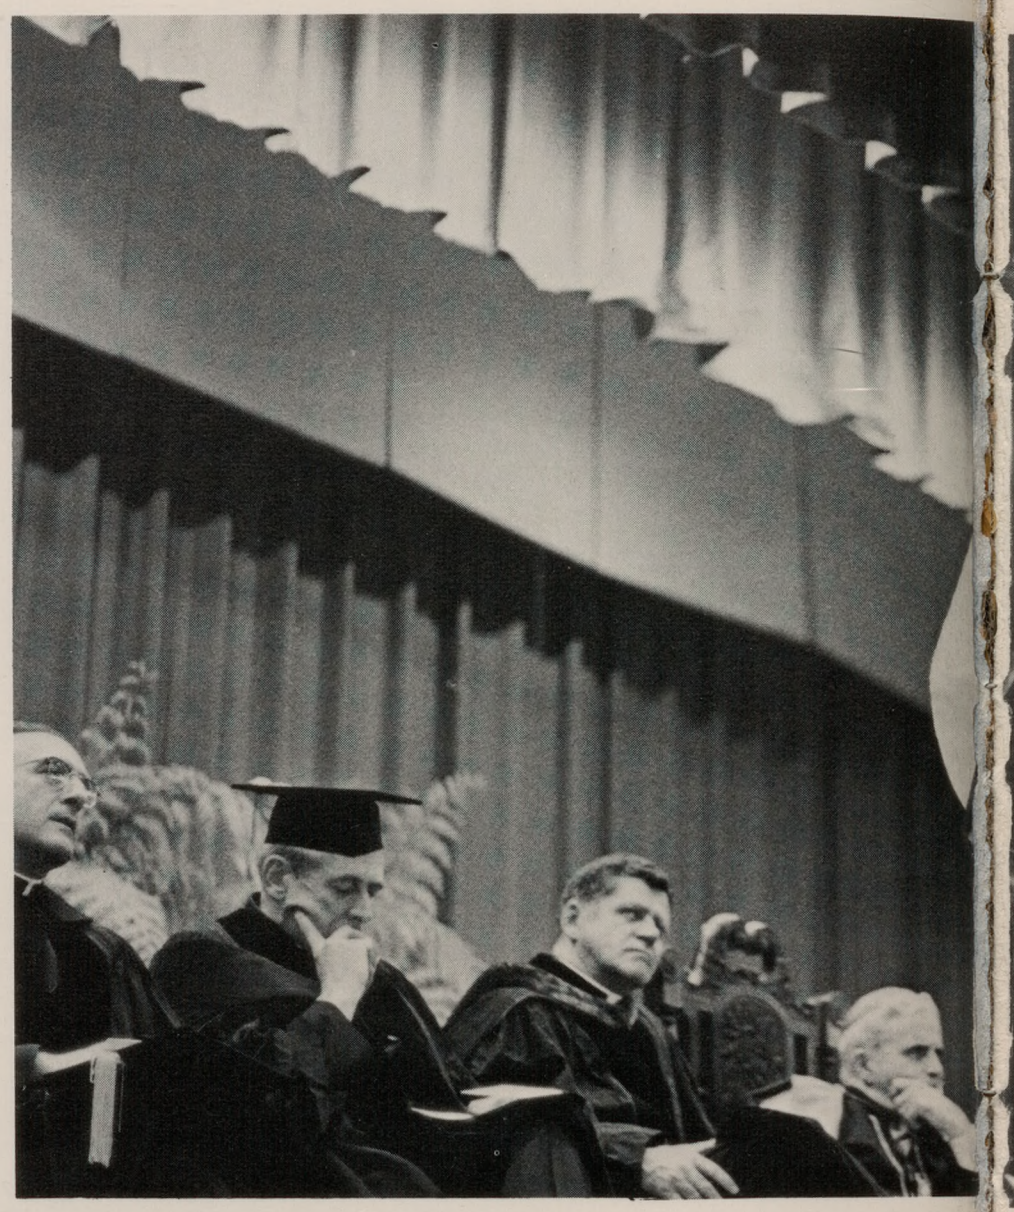

Bishop Dougherty confers an honorary degree on Clark Kerr.

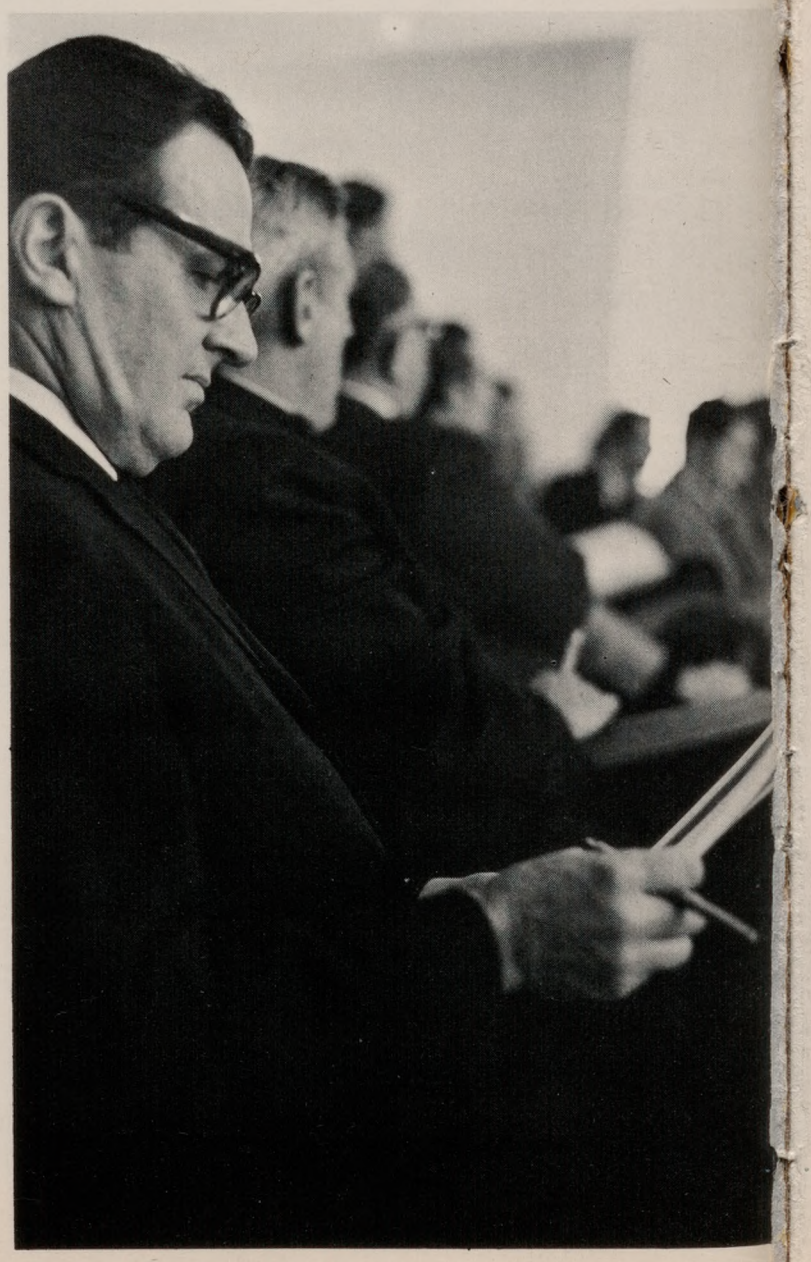

Thursday, March 6, 11 a.m.

Mr. Kerr accepts gratefully as the honored guest of our Founder's Day exercises.

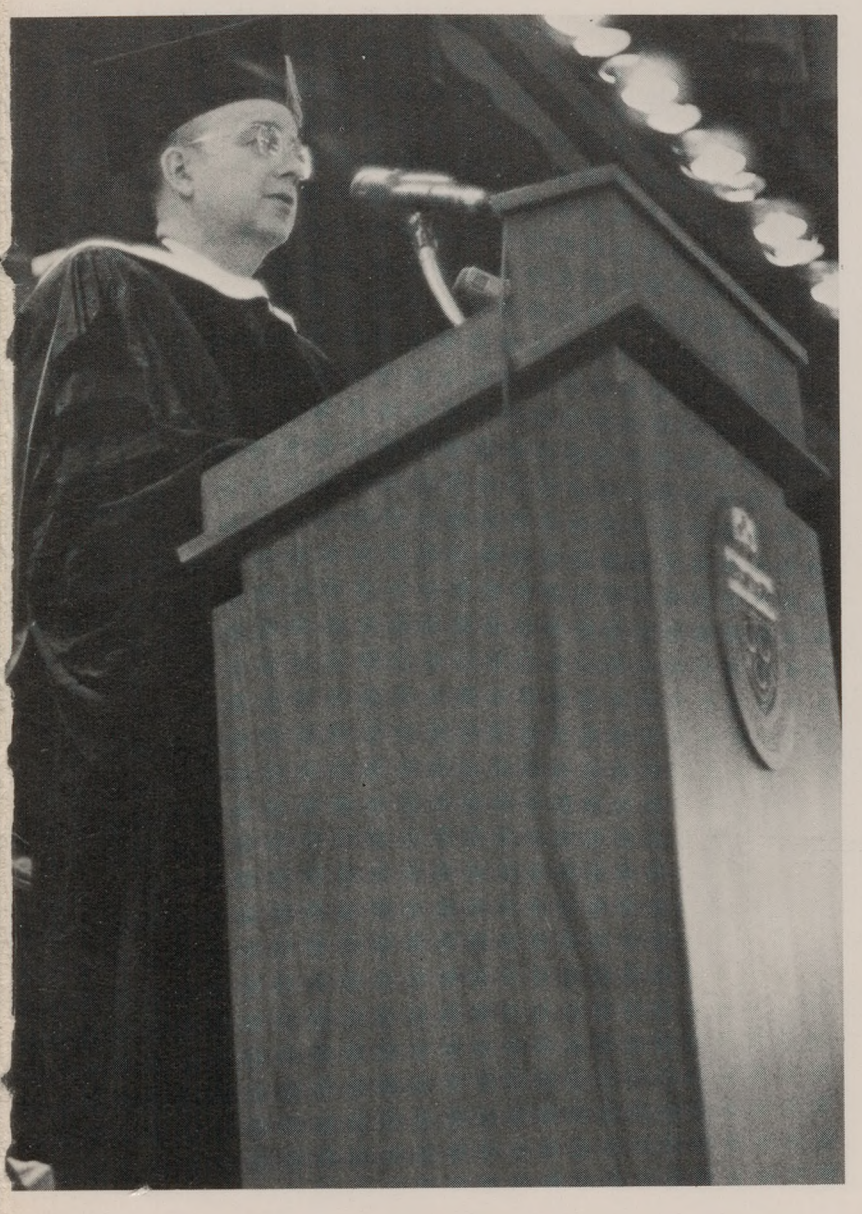

2 p.m.

Dean Senkier prepares his amendment to the original proposal.

Sal Perillo reads a proposal for the establishment of tri-partite committee.

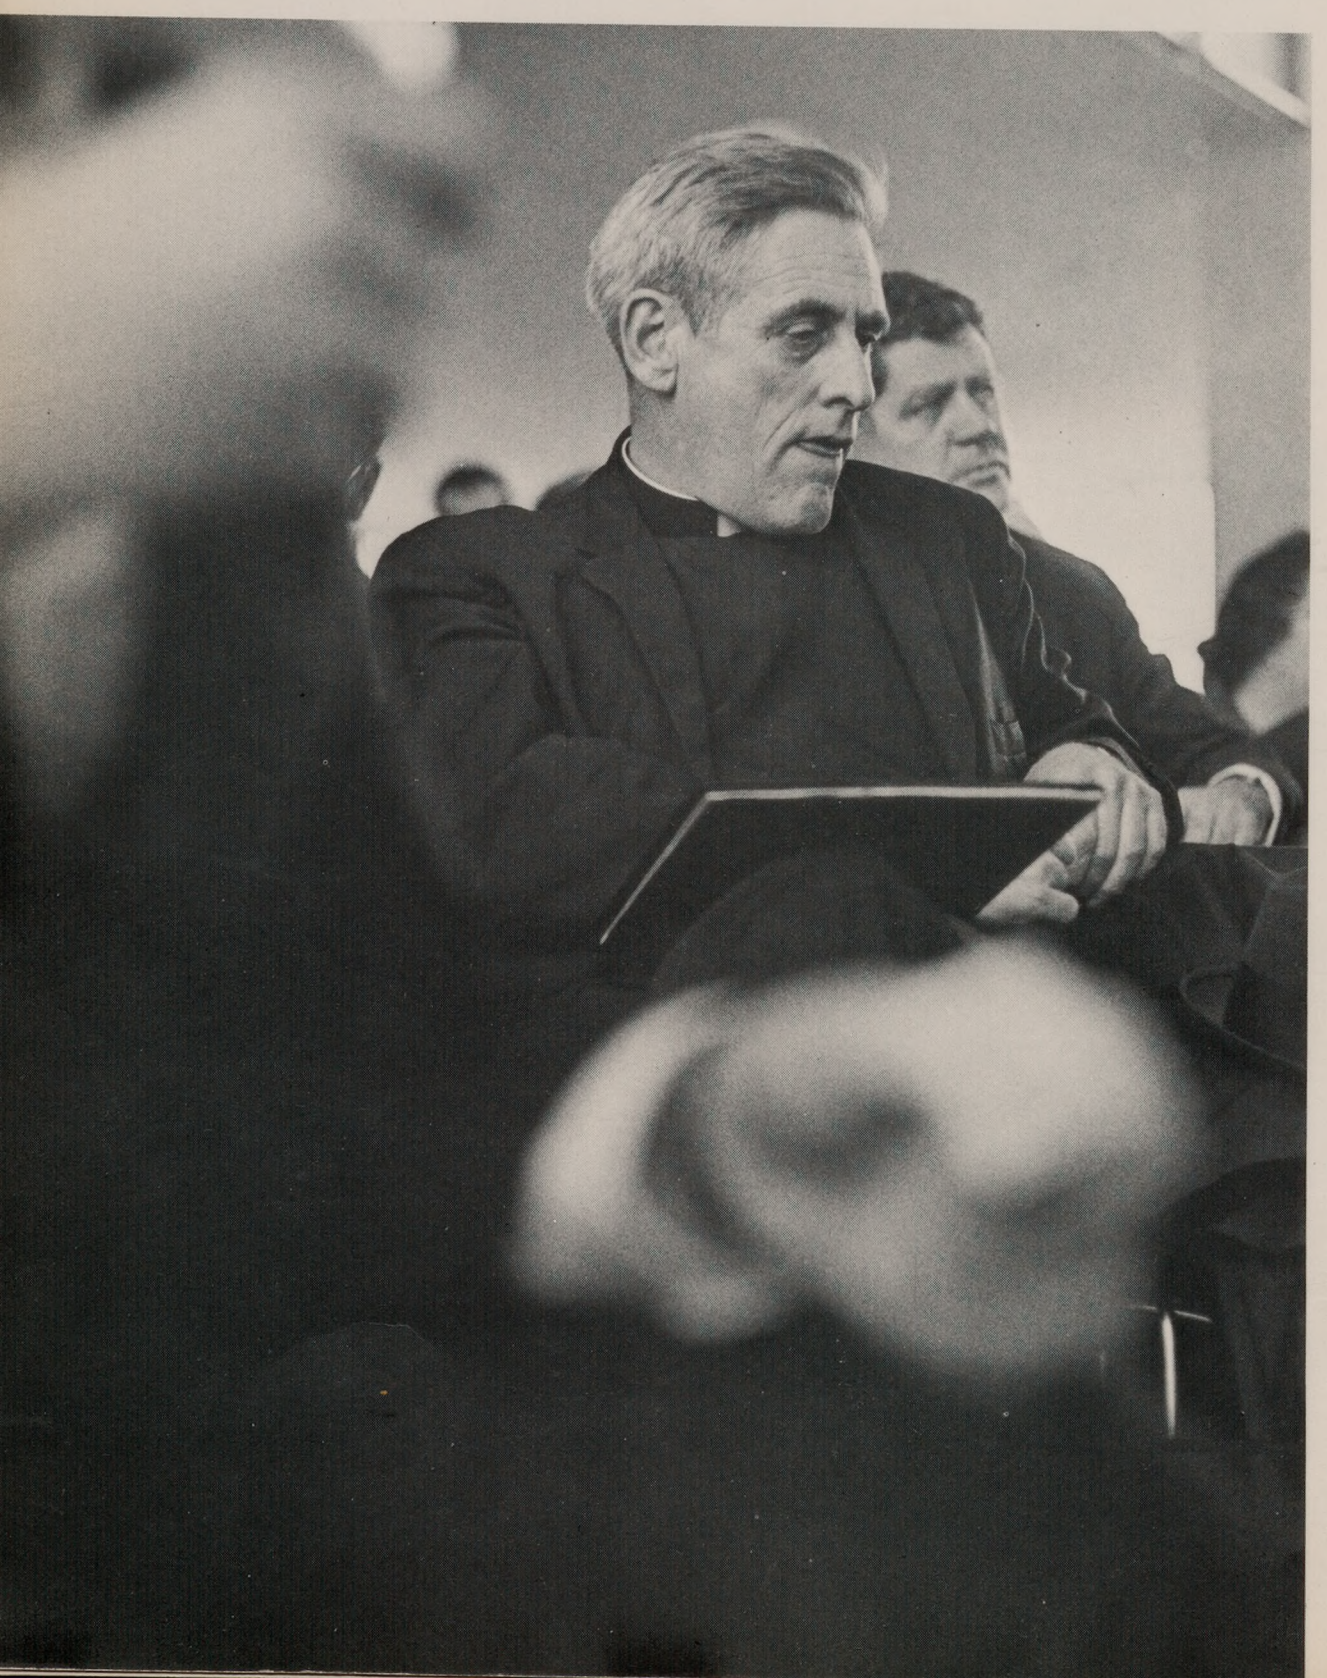

Parliamentary procedure gave way to Professor Harold Petipas' cry to be heard.

Dr. Petipas makes a plea to the students not to believe what the faculty has to tell them.

Professor Tom Emmett cries out against the amendment of Dean Senkier.

There were those who screamed and shouted, and then there were those who considered all that had been said before they spoke. Here we see Fr. Fahy arranging his amendment carefully in his mind before he presents it to the body.

5:00 p.m.

As the discussion was nearing an end, some stopped to reflect upon what had taken place. Here, Doctors Duff and Mitchell compare their ideas.

Finally, when the topic had been thoroughly hashed out, a vote was taken. The proposal was passed unanimously.

Likewise, Monsignor Fleming waited a considerable length of time before he ever said a word.

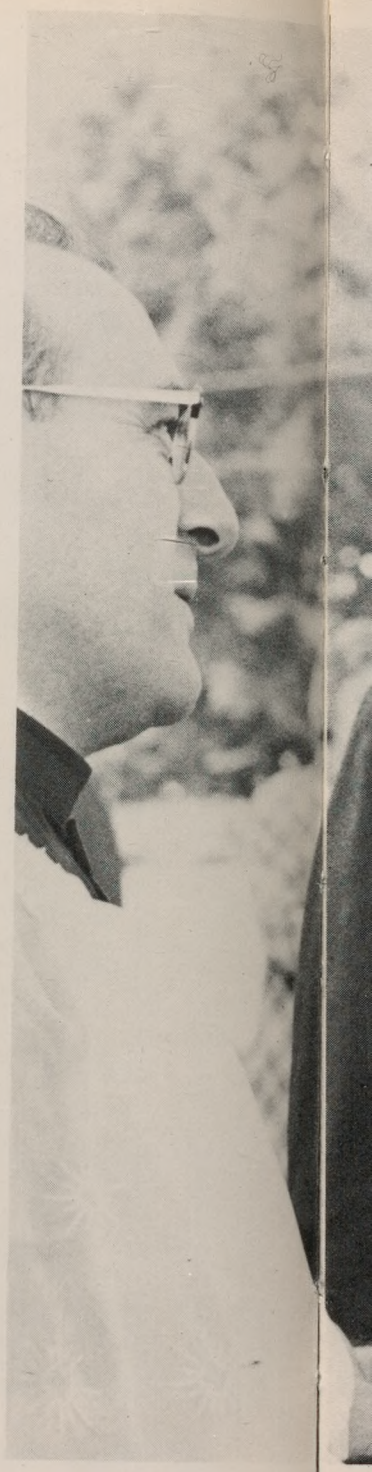

Now, Bishop Dougherty would give his approval, and this day, Thursday, March 6, would be history.

The year 1968-1969 was a great political year both for the nation and for Seton Hall. Here at Seton Hall we saw an attempt by the students to gain a voice in the university's decision-making process. We saw one member of our family make a bid for Congress. We saw priests contending with our archbishop. We saw a man who had a dream about ending a war. We also saw a man, a kindly man, attempt to become Vice-President.

We saw some of these succeed, but we saw some of these fail. However, even by failing all is not wasted. If by failing one man's eyes are opened to the bad which is going on, and if one man is given a bit of hope, then to fail is sacred.

The Black Students League Presents SOUL WEEKEND

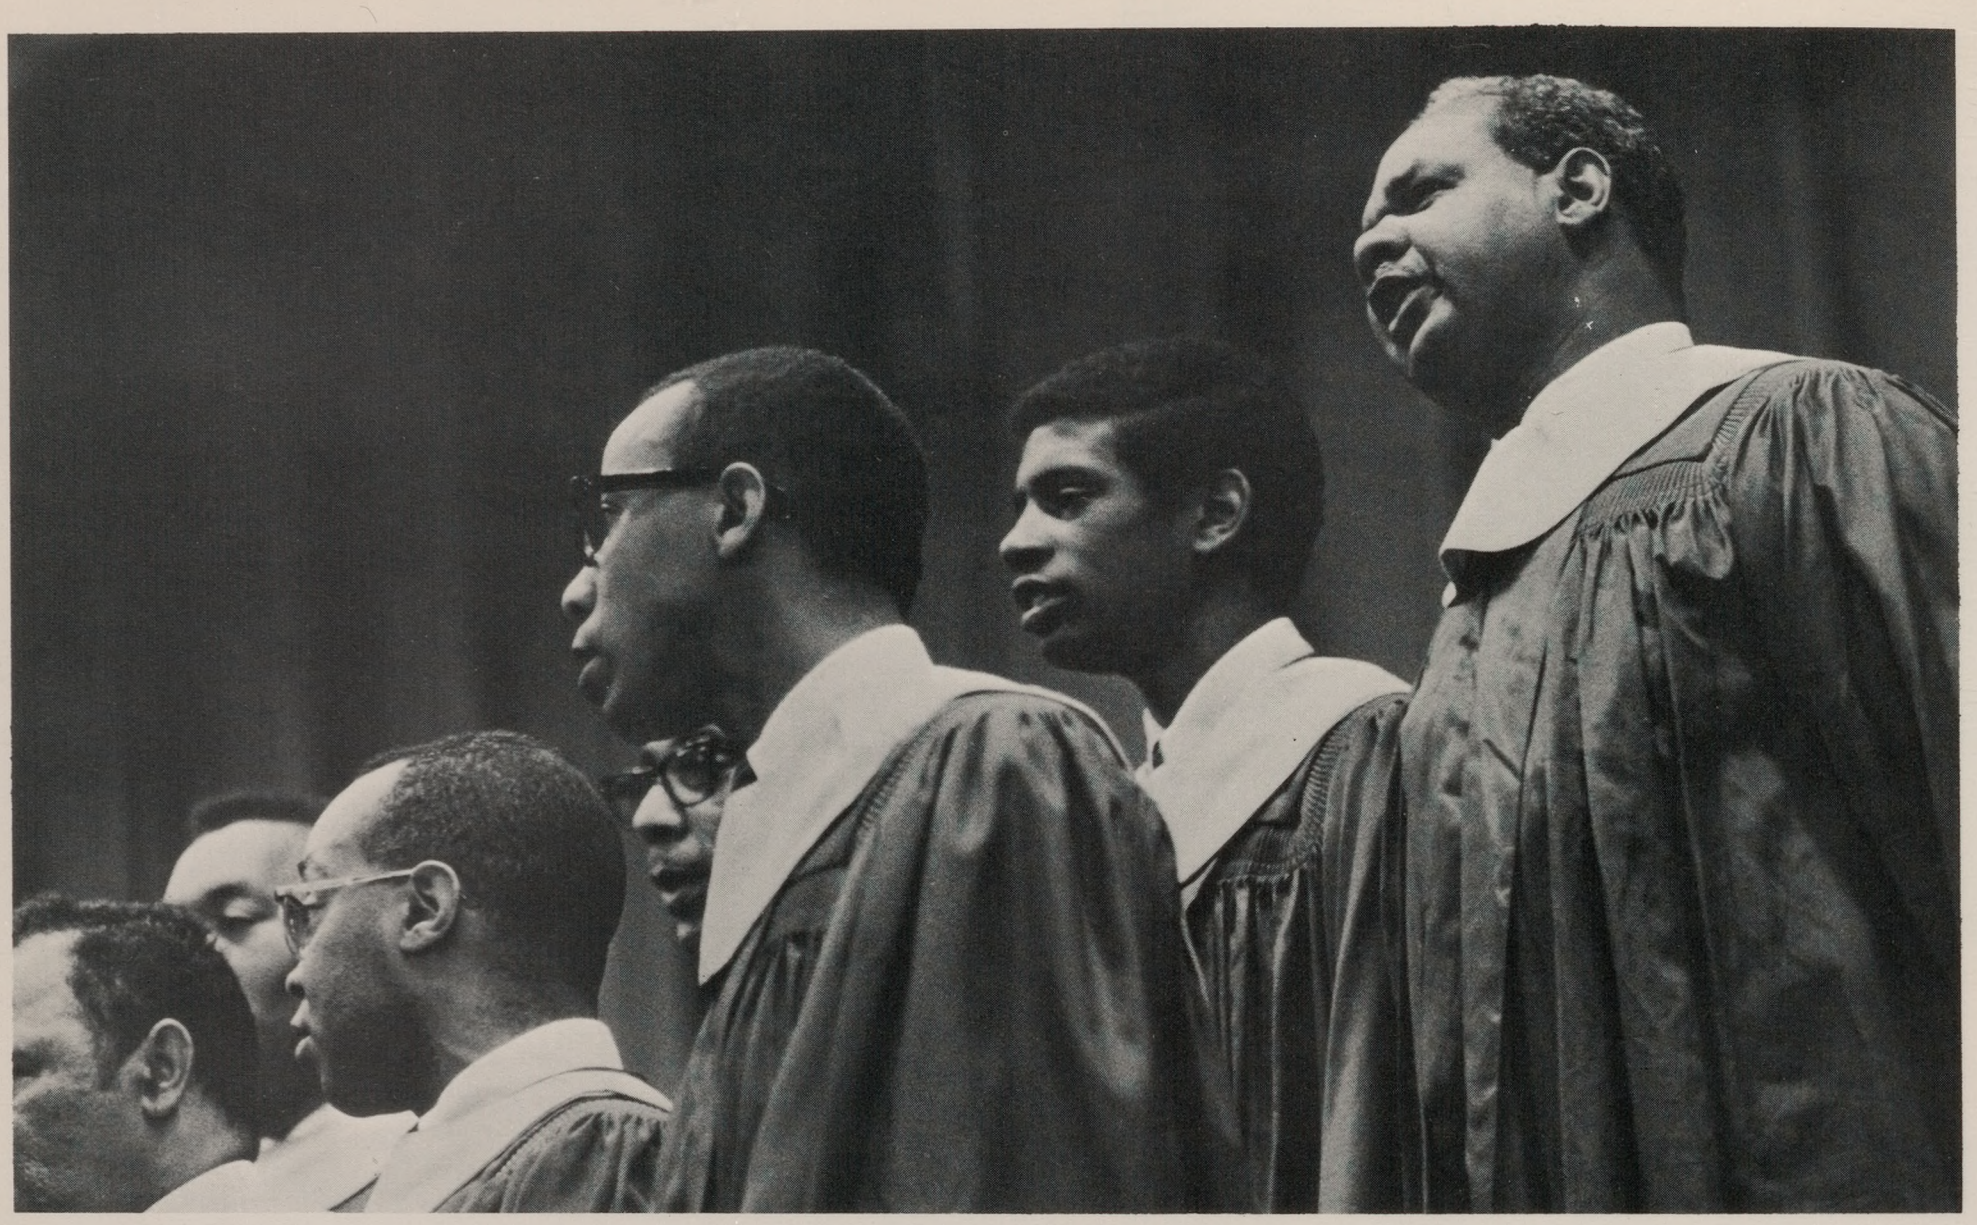

Saturday saw many exhibitions of black culture such as lectures on Negro art, poetry reading and soul music by local talent.

The Weekend started with a concert by the inimitable James Brown. At one point he was challenged for his place on stage by one of the most soulful five-year-olds ever seen.

One of the most significant events of the weekend was the inter-denominational service which took place on Sunday. The "Gospel Jamboree" involved eight groups of various sects in a demonstration of Negro liturgical music which ranged from the traditional gospel choir to the contemporary soul quartet. The underlying characteristic of all the performances was a vitality seldom experienced in white Christian liturgy. This vitality gradually spread to everyone present giving us a rarely felt sense of communal worship.

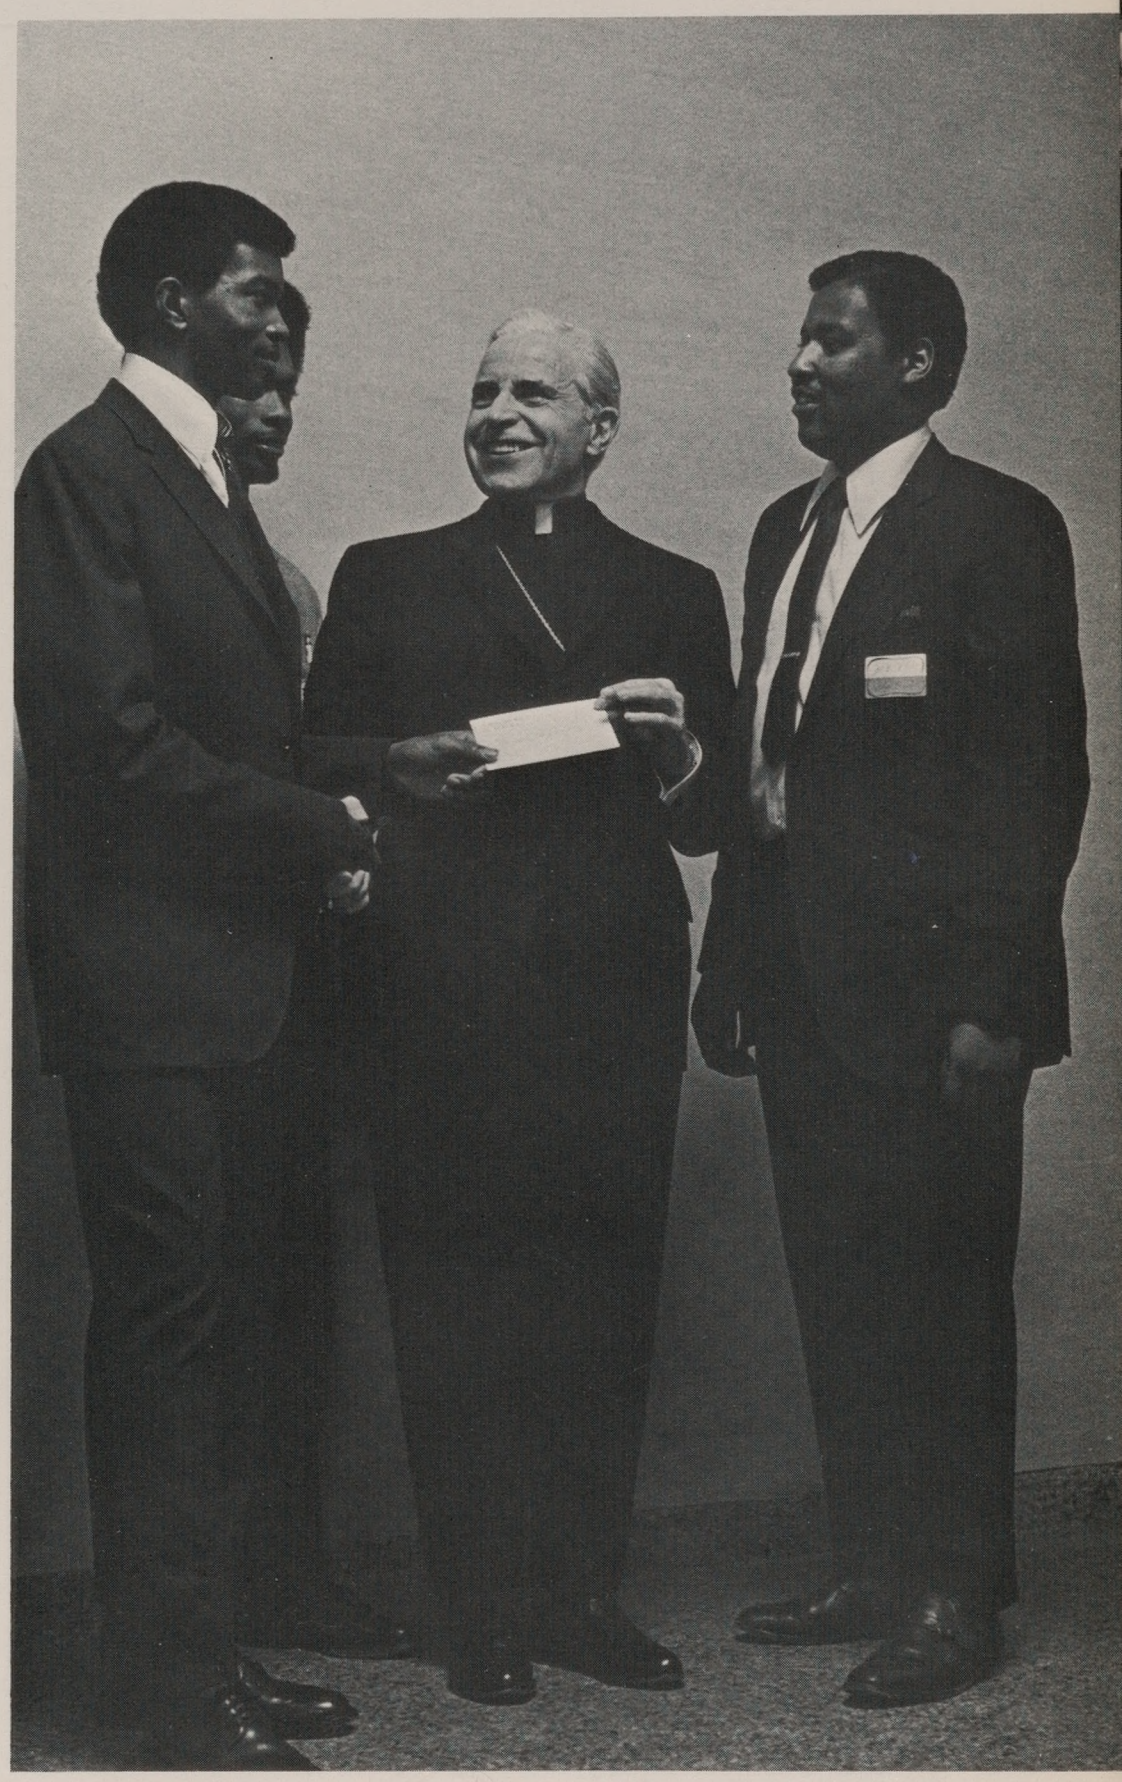

It was in the involvement of man's humanity in the worship of God that the black service achieved its excellence.

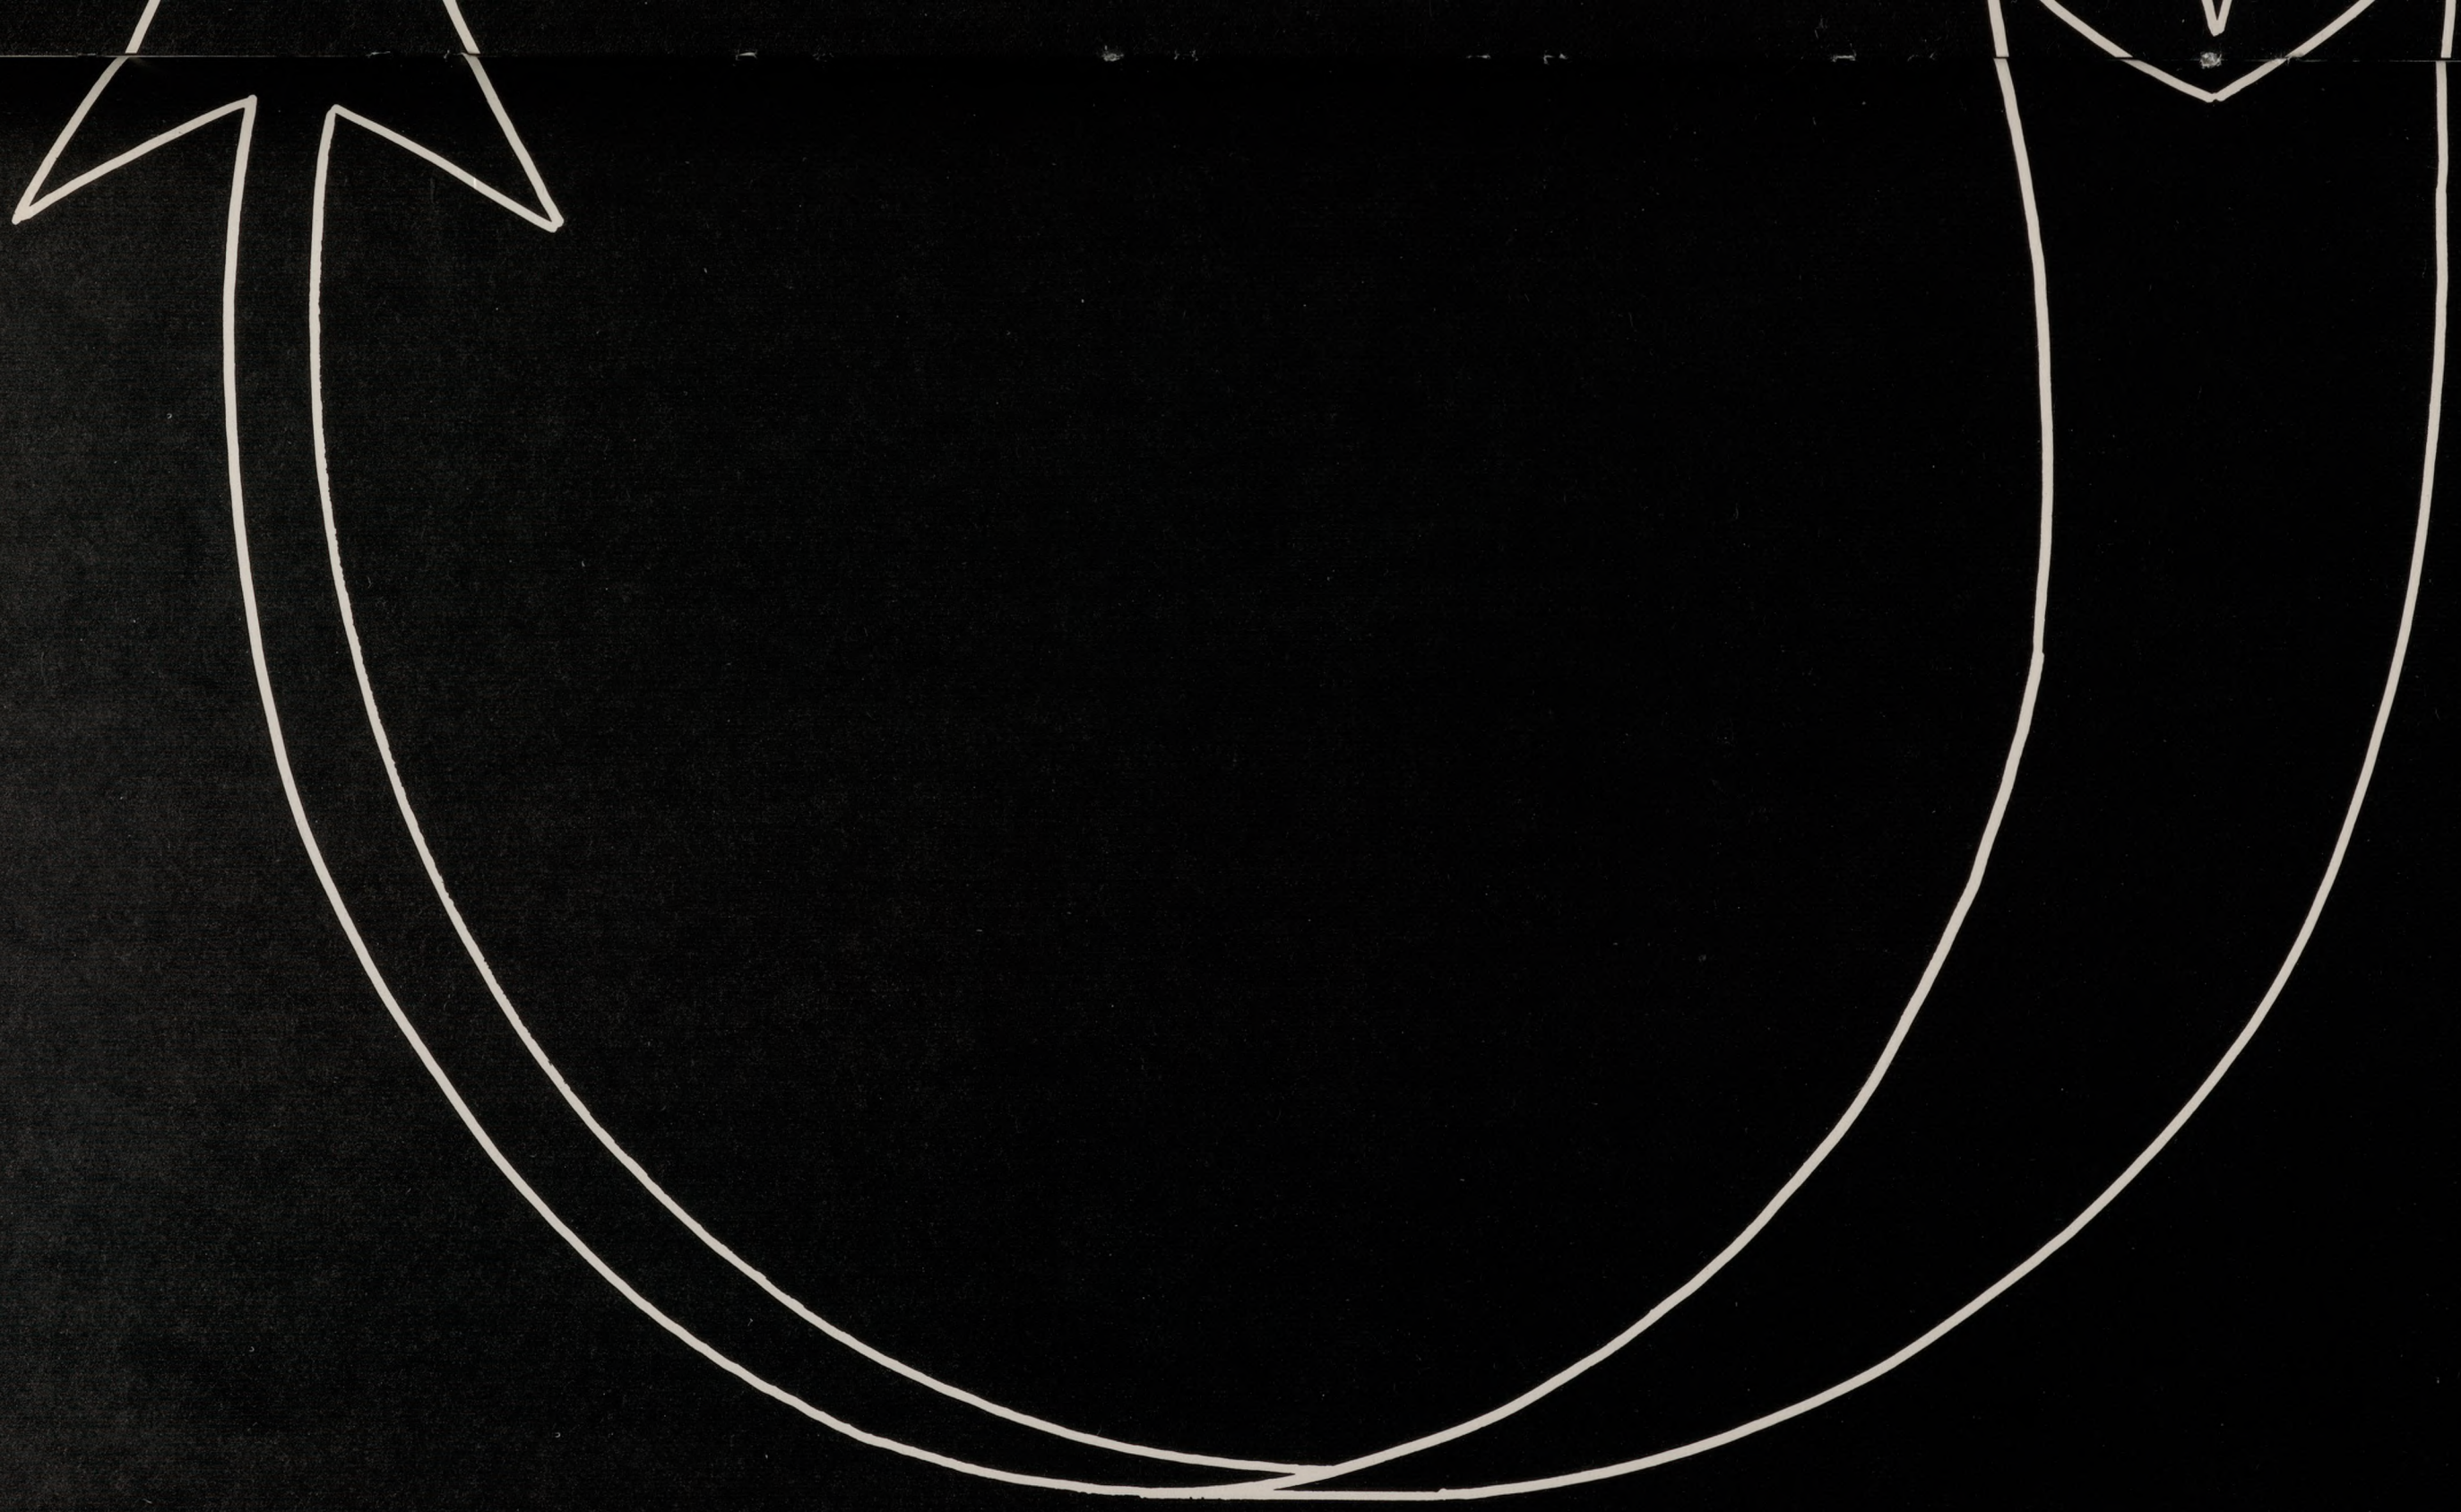

Soul Weekend was not limited to the young. People of all ages contributed to this exhibition of black culture and unity.

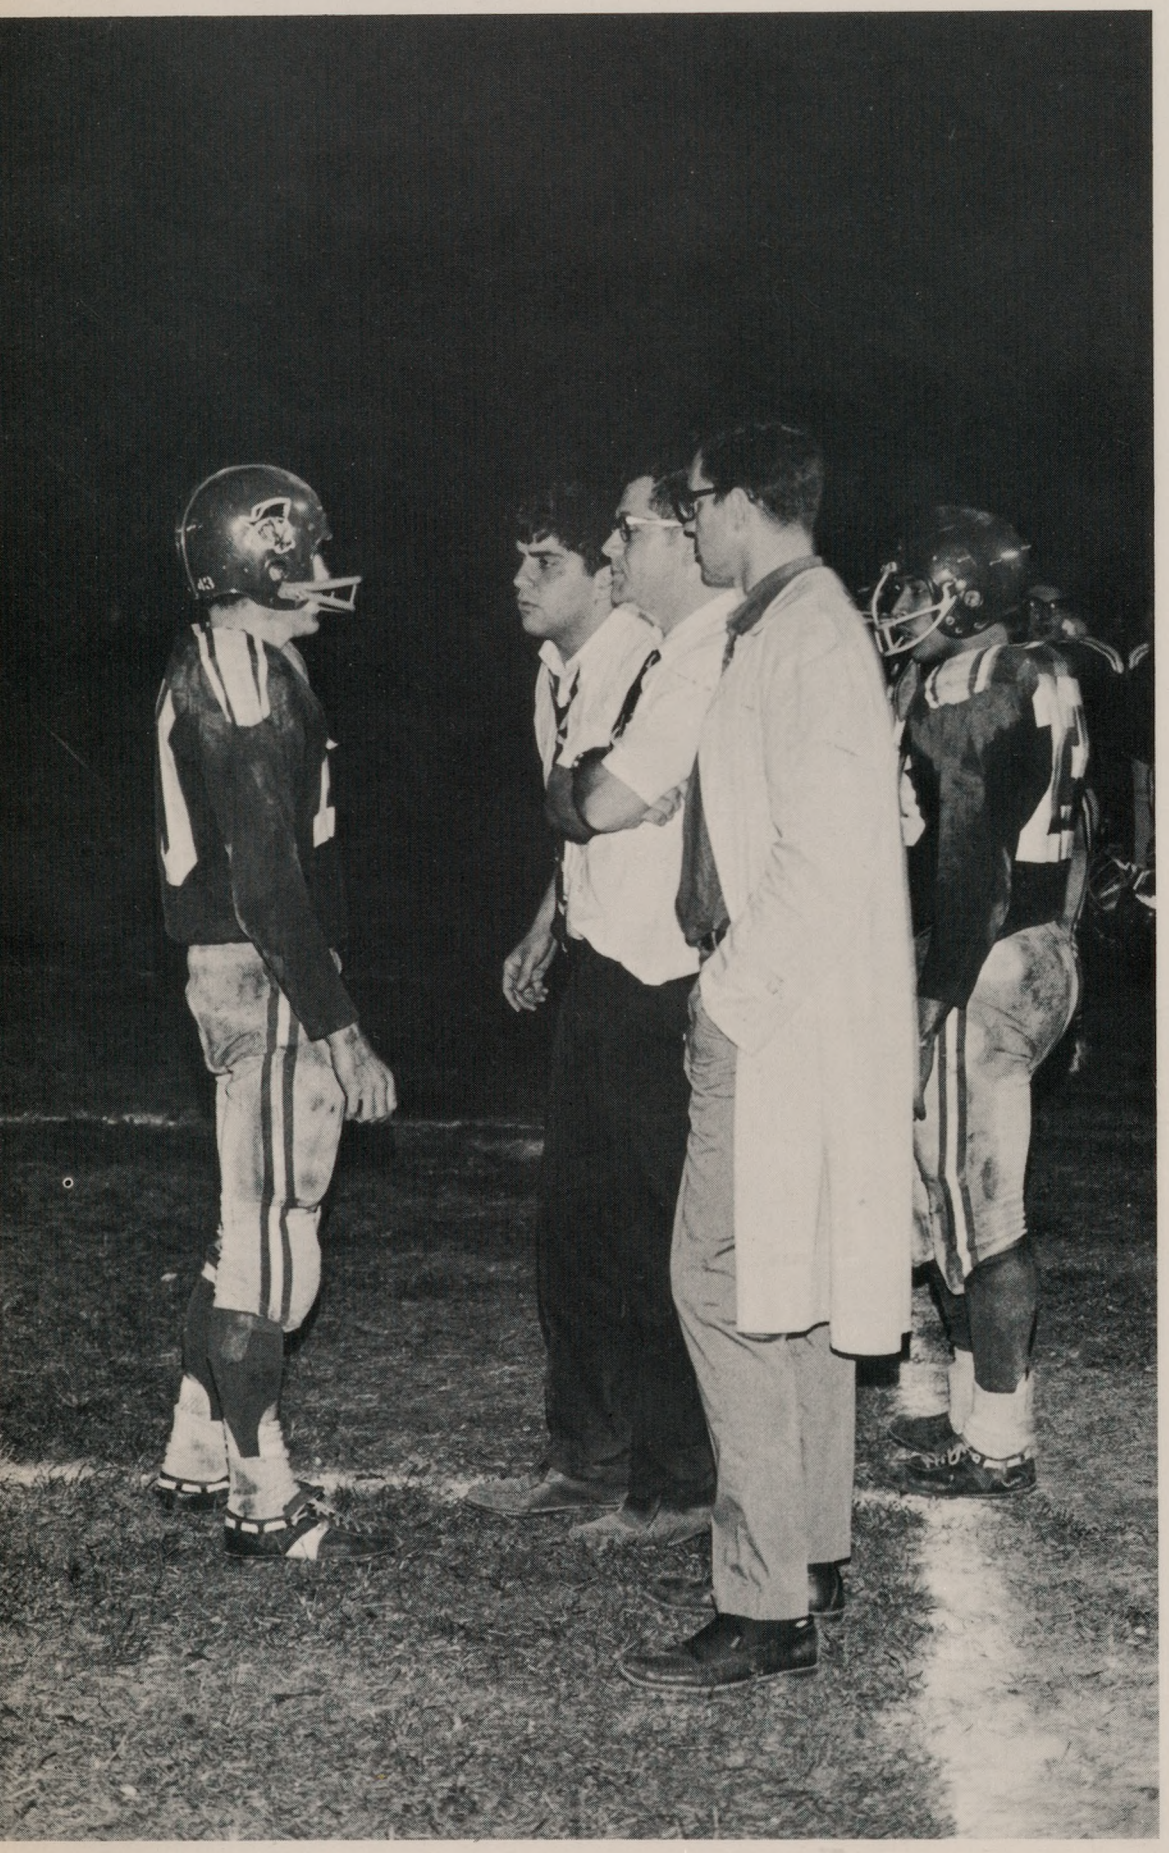

The purpose for which the weekend was conducted was fulfilled when Jimmy Deas presented the Bishop with a check for the Martin Luther King Scholarship Fund. It is also worth noting that James Brown personally contributed a thousand dollars to the fund and will do so for the next four years.

TRACK

Running
Running is a limberous mixture of arms and legs and heartbeat and inhales and exhales and reaching and pumping and sweating:
pushing off the ground and moving over the ground Forward.
To run is to feel your body loose and strong and Working, forward. Along the ground before you.
(pull your elbows back and push off the ground and you move forward and your body is a Long swift ship setting sail.)
Done with ease and rhythm your body is a poem running in through the music of the ground, of the earth. Rolling into the hills and slopes and flats and rocky places and green meadow grass that is soft and delicious to run in and Join.
Running joins. Moving, pulsing, working blood of one joins streams with the other as the streams of all tributaries must flow mixed with the Great River. Flowing mingled in motion and movement through each other,
And then, maybe a breeze or a passing leafy tree joins the runner to the things above and around and all things move along in undulating flow of different size circles, all wrapped in one.
Earth to Runner, Runner to Earth. Earth—when all are joined in fiber, in touch, in working flow Wonderful working and music into each other,
the Earth and the Runner, the poem.
And the runner must stop: and slowly disjoin himself piece and piece of himself again, separation from the earth pulling himself into arms and legs and inhales and exhales, while the music, the song, the brief poem is ebbing.
But for one span, one circle when all life is joined the Runner knows joy.
Fitting. fitting into the Poem, the Song, and Possessing power and being possessed by power, creating and Answering!
Once having been and then like green meadow grass torn from the womb all undone from the Poem.
the Runner separates.
And joy of answering Truth draws the runner aside—alone. For the runner, the poet, stands poised on the brink of another song to come, another run.

SPRING FEVER - 1969

While the vestiges of winter still sparkled, Spring struck our compus on Tuesday, March 18—two days ahead of schedule. It caught us by surprise, but we managed to make the best of it. Classes were cut to make time for skateboarding and softballing.

"Winter left through there. He seemed to be in a hurry."

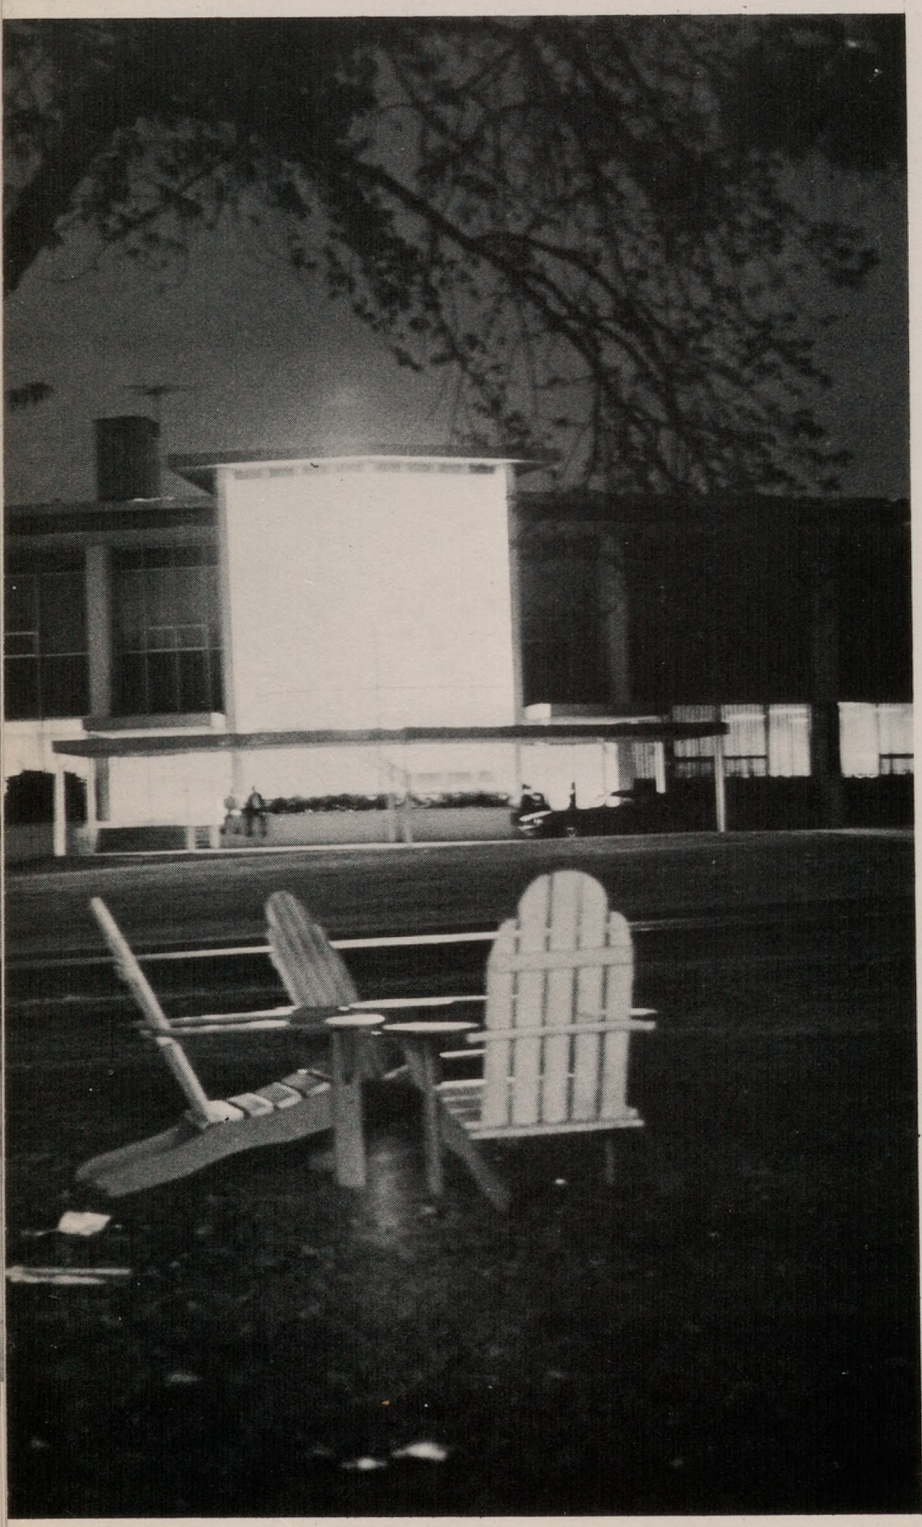

The flora and fauna wake up while long-unused lawn chairs wait for occupants.

When the weather warms up,
so do the arms.

What Nature has wrought,
let not even the Law
put asunder.
